Newsbriefs

Blood drive coming up

There will be an Inland Northwest Blood Center blood drive at the Coulee Medical Center from 11:30 to 5 p.m. Monday, Nov. 26.

The draw will be held in the old clinic lobby and the organizers are hoping for a large turnout. INBC needs an average of 200 donors every day to meet the need.

Community watch

The community watch group from Electric City met Monday night at the firehall in Electric City. The two organizers, Birdie Hensley and Lonna Bussert, and police sergeant John Tufts attended. The group hasn't announced when it will meet again.

Pay increases negotiated

It appears that employees in Grand Coulee are going to do the best when it comes to "cost of living" increases for 2013.

By agreement with the unions, City Clerk Carol Boyce said, the workers in Grand Coulee will get a 2.5-percent increase.

The only other municipality whose employees will get an increase in 2013, according to a call to city clerks, is Electric City. That council was scheduled to vote on a 1.3-percent increase at its Tuesday night meeting.

Elmer City and Coulee Dam workers didn't expect to receive a "COLA" for next year.

Mayor meeting postponed

The regular meeting of the Regional Board of Mayors has been rescheduled to 4 p.m., Monday, Nov. 17, at Electric City's council chambers. The meeting was changed due to Veteran's Day.

Crimson versus Gold game

Crimson versus Gold basketball games will be held Tuesday, Nov. 20, at 7 p.m. Come watch as the Raider boys and Lady Raiders hold their season opening intrasquad games.

All proceeds from the games go to benefit LRHS students in need through the LR Christmas Wish program.

Cost is $4 per person and no passes will be accepted for this charitable event.

More police to watch for drunk drivers

As part of the Washington Traffic Safety Commission's "Drive Sober or Get Pulled Over" holiday campaign, extra police officers will be canvassing roadways from Nov. 21 and Jan. 1, 2013 throughout Grant and Adams Counties, searching for impaired drivers, the commission said.

Grand Coulee man tasered, arrested

by Roger S. Lucas

Police arrested a Grand Coulee man Saturday after he allegedly broke free from an arresting officer and was later found in a Hill Avenue apartment.

Officer Gary Moore had first contacted Lorenzo Stewart, 46, of 411 Partello Park, when he saw him walking on Spokane Way.

Moore stated in his report that he had read of a warrant out for Stewart and confronted him.

Upon checking, Moore found that Stewart was actually wanted on two warrants and there was a request to pick him up.

While Moore was attempting to put cuffs on him, Stewart broke free and started to run, Moore's report states. That's when Moore tried to chase him down and fell in the snow, injuring his right knee. He got up and fired his taser stun gun, hitting Stewart in the back.

Moore tried to subdue Stewart again, but fell again on the snow-covered ground, giving the man time to break away. Both fell in the snow, but Stewart was able to get up and run down the alley behind the Center Lodge Motel.

Officers looked for the man but couldn't find him until a call came in that he might be at a Hill Avenue apartment.

Officer Joe Higgs responded and found Stewart in an upstairs room at the apartment and called for him to come down. Stewart was arrested, and he complained to police that he had hurt himself in one of the falls and wanted to go to the hospital.

While there, he was told that he would be charged with assault in the third degree, escape in the third degree and resisting arrest in addition to the two warrants. The warrants were issued in connection with charges of making a false statement to a law enforcement officer and driving while his license was suspended.

Moore's report stated that, while at the hospital, Stewart said, "I am going to go out in a blaze of glory, I'm going to take a bunch of you ... with me." Then Stewart looked at Moore and said, "You do the math," Moore's report states.

Moore's took that as a threat. Police were also going to request that charges of lying to a police officer be filed against Sherry Crinklaw, who they say initially told officers at the apartment that Stewart was not there.

Two town councils meet on multi-million dollar questions

by Roger S. Lucas and Scott Hunter

Elmer City had stated that it wanted a seat at the table.

Last Wednesday night, its town council met with Coulee Dam's council, and it got a seat at the table, but significant questions remain.

At issue is a $4.92 million wastewater treatment plant upgrade now under design.

Foremost in Elmer City's mind was whether it was a partner in Coulee Dam's wastewater treatment plant, or merely a customer.

While that wasn't answered directly, Elmer City was advised that anytime in the future that Coulee Dam was going to discuss its planned wastewater treatment plant, Elmer City would be invited.

Both councils had their respective attorneys present: Mick Howe for Coulee Dam and Laura D. McAloon for Elmer City.

After a long discussion between council members of both towns, attorney Howe asked, "Does it really make a difference whether you are a partner or a customer?"

Howe and others said the current 37-year-old agreement between the two towns is open for discussion and change. The agreement was made in 1975.

"You could start a new agreement going forward," Howe said, adding that the existing language doesn't really benefit Elmer City.

Attorney McAloon concurred that the agreement could stand some new language.

However, no one followed up on how this would happen. A suggestion that the two attorneys could exchange emails was met by Howe's comment, "I think it is premature for that."

The "partner or a customer" question was asked repeatedly by Elmer City Councilmember Larry Holford.

Elmer City considering its own sewer plant

by Roger S. Lucas

Elmer City is keeping its options open in regard to Coulee Dam's wastewater treatment plant project.

Town Council members Thursday night discussed the project and still feel that they would like to explore the possibility of building a wastewater treatment plant of their own.

The previous night, Elmer City council met with Coulee Dam's council to discuss the $4.92 million project and felt like they had achieved a half loaf. Coulee Dam Councilmember Karl Hjorten told Elmer City that he would make sure that their council members were invited to any future discussions of the plant.

Some members at Elmer City think it is a little late for that, but will be happy to look at all avenues of sewer service, including their own.

Chamber event to offer top wines, brews

by Roger S. Lucas

The Grand Coulee Dam Area Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual Vintners/Brewers/Auction event Saturday, Dec. 1, at the Vets Center in Electric City.

Chamber Manager Peggy Nevsimal said that only 49 tickets remain for the event.

The hall will hold 180 for the popular event and 131 tickets have already been sold.

The event includes wine sampling, and sampling of popular Washington microbrews, and both a silent and live auction.

Among featured producers will be some top Washington wineries, including LEcole No. 41, Otis Kenyon and Patit Creek Cellars.

Microbrews offered will include those of Odessa's own Rocky Coulee Brewing Co.

Nevsimal stated that the chamber was still receiving auction items and is open to more donations. The event is a major fund raiser for the chamber.

Items for both the silent and oral auction can be taken to the chamber office or donors can call the chamber at 633-3074.

There will be heavy hors d'oeuvres at the event.

Ticket sales continue through the chamber office, The Star and H&H Grocery. No tickets will be available at the door. Ticket prices are $30 for an individual, $50 for a couple or $200 for a table for 10.

Park & rec levy looking at defeat

by Roger S. Lucas

The Coulee Area Park & Recreation District's effort to get public funding was looking like it would fail as of Tuesday afternoon.

By Friday, the combined yes votes from the district boundaries in the four counties showed that it had 1,036 yes votes and 779 no votes for a 57.08 favorable return. But the measure needed 60 percent yes votes to pass.

The outcome was not certain Tuesday, as Okanogan County election officials stated that there were still about 4,000 ballots to count. One official stated that he didn't know how many of the ballots contained the parks & recreation issue. He said all the ballots would be counted by sometime Wednesday.

District Chairman Phil Hansen said Tuesday that he doesn't see the district running a new levy election "anytime soon."

Hansen said the district still has the "North Dam Park and the aqua park project still to work on, so we will have plenty to do."

Douglas County gave the district its best return on the operation and maintenance levy, showing that 59.17 percent were in favor of public funding. There were 100 yes votes there, compared to 69 no votes.

Grant County produced the most votes, with 513 in favor (56.87

U.S. Marshals ask for help finding fugitives

On Nov. 4, two federal inmates, Brandon Carson, 29, and Wayne Mellgren, 32, walked away from the Spokane Residential Re-entry Center (RRC) without authorization or permission, the U.S. Marshal's office stated in a press release Friday.

Both fugitives were at the RRC finishing the end of their sentences. Escape warrants were issued for both Carson and Mellgren on Nov. 8, 2012, in the Eastern District of Washington.

Carson was serving the end of

"I have trouble with that word," Howe said. "I think you are setting yourself up for a stalemate." He said other language could be inserted that would help solve the underlying problem.

But McAloon said the question was being asked because there would be no use in writing new language if it didn't start from the premise that Elmer City should have a voice in the planning process.

"I would be really hesitant to say you are a partner if that means that you could vote and say, 'Well, we don't want to do the whole thing,'" Coulee Dam Councilmember Ken Miles said. "I mean ... we have gone to a lot of work here."

The project is currently in the design phase and is scheduled to go to bid in the spring with construction completed by 2014.

Elmer City has repeatedly asked why, since it produces one-quarter of what goes through the plant, it wasn't involved in the planning of the plant.

Coulee Dam Councilmember Karl Hjorten stated that on two occasions Elmer City Council was invited for wastewater plant presentations by Coulee Dam engineers Gray & Osborne. At one of the meetings, no one showed up, and at the other only Town Clerk Renée Tillman attended.

Regardless of what's happened in the past Hjorten said, "The question for me is, where do we go right now?" He said he was open to forming an entirely new agreement that reflects current reality.

Coulee Dam Town Clerk Carol Visker said that Elmer City's portion of the project bill as planned would come to about $82,000 a year.

Of concern to Elmer City is the monthly service charges it will take to retire the debt on the project. Mayor Mary Jo Carey has repeatedly stated that her residents are mostly on fixed income and couldn't take the projected high sewer charges.

Barry Peacock, Coulee Dam's public works director, said recent interruptions may delay to some extent the timing of the project. He proposed that maybe a committee made up of a couple of council members from each town might pursue changes in the agreement.

Mayor Quincy Snow said that meetings continue with the Colville Tribes, Indian Health Services and the Bureau of Reclamation on how they might participate in the funding of the project.

If those groups come aboard, it could significantly reduce the monthly sewer charges in both towns.

Two meetings of these parties have already been held, and Snow said that when the next meeting was held all the parties would be invited.

The plant has become a major issue with Elmer City in the past few months after Coulee Dam resident Greg Wilder raised questions about the project at Elmer City council meetings.

percent) and 389 against.

Lincoln County came in with 73 yes votes (54.07 percent) and 62 no votes.

In Okanogan County, 350 yes votes (57.47 percent) stacked up against 259 no votes.

If the levy were to pass, it would mean that the recreation district, which follows the boundary of the Grand Coulee Dam School District, would collect 15 cents per thousand dollars of assessed value from property owners, or $15 per $100,000 of valuation.

The district had hoped for passage so it could use the estimated $35,000 as matching funds for possible grant monies.

Hansen said he was "somewhat disappointed." It was the second time the district's efforts with voters has failed, that is, if Wednesday's final count doesn't change things.

"Our commissioners plan to get together to discuss the results soon," Hansen said.

Letters From Our Readers

Loved the heartwarming article

I want to thank Jesse Utz for the heartwarming article October 24 (the son becoming 18). In this age of family upsets, it was so good to know about the love there. Thanks.

P.S., I remember you and your dad, Jesse, and ice cream, when you were little at Smitty's! (where NCNB is now). Long time ago!

Love the articles. Tell all hello and doing much better, but miss everyone.

Re: "Son deserves better coverage" (Letters from Our Readers, 11-7-12)

First, as a retired Navy veteran and Lake Roosevelt graduate, thank you for all who served, will serve, and support the local community. As I read the comment about racism in that article, I find myself wondering what I fought for. I have no problem with your concerns about the coverage on your son, but please don't make that an excuse for a possible mistake by the local media. Remember, nobody is perfect. If this is the direction of this country in playing the race card for every disagreement or controversy, then why did I serve? Sad day in America.

Project shows government not at its best

As most of you know, the town of Coulee Dam is investing (spending) over $5 million to upgrade their "aging" sewer treatment plant. I've written letters about this before. The town continues to pursue a design that is both antiquated and unnecessarily expensive while their consulting engineer is disproportionately enriched (they will take a bit over $1 million out of this community). This project impacts the sewer rates of Coulee Dam AND Elmer City, driving those monthly charges to $80 or more.

Typically, a project of this expense and scope would have involved an early and concerted effort for diverse funding ... to fund from more than a simple loan. But that wouldn't have been as easy or as lucrative for their engineering consultant. One of the most likely places to look would have been the Colville Tribe and the Indian Health Service ... but this would involve an expansion of the "partnership" and a closer look at the project scope/design, so the Town Council (and their engineer) seemed uninterested. Even though the town began "planning" for this project 10 years ago, and the Facility Plan has a funding/financing section, it was concluded that for money from the Tribe/Indian Health Service, "... it was too difficult to determine how many tribal members are in the service area ..." Took me less than a half an hour! In fact, Mayor Snow complained that he tried, but could not even get the Tribe to return his calls! So I decided to become an activist in order to help us all find a way to both review the project scope/design and find "grant" funding to help with the financing. I contacted the tribe and they were, in fact, interested in learning more. I subsequently met with them three or four times to define the issue and its impact on over 230 native families. The tribe was both gracious and thoughtful. And finally, Mayor Snow really does contact the tribe and drags his interest-conflicted engineers along. The Tribe brings in its Public Works director and the Indian Health Service (IHS) to listen and advise.

The Indian Health Service steps up and appropriately assumes a leadership roll in the quest for funding and promptly suggests that it "may" be able to provide as much as $1.6 million in "grant" monies to help with the project and that it may be able to, through a "government-to-government" connection, bring the USBR to the table with yet additional funding. However, any/all grant funding agencies want to review the design to determine first if money could be saved by a better and/or more efficient design. The town's response was to ignore (and resist) that request and to push forward with the under-planned, over-designed, and excessively expensive project, even though they know there are viable alternatives at half the cost — ranging upwards from $2.2 million. The IHS even offered to manage and inspect the construction phase, saving even more, but the town, and of course its engineer (who stood to lose almost $400,000), were not interested and were unresponsive!

There is now, not because of any efforts by the town or its mayor, the very real possibility to fund all but $900,000 of this project from "grant" or other non-loan funds, which would make it unnecessary to increase the sewer charges above their current level. Mayor Snow hasn't even bothered to inform his council of these new and emerging financing options, but claims to be in constant contact with the Indian Health Service Engineer that is no longer spearheading the project ... doesn't even remember the new engineer's name!

And the town's engineer? Well, think about it ... for each dollar the town saves by reducing project scope costs, they lose between 20 and 30 cents. If the IHS manages and inspects, the town's engineer will lose, as I mentioned earlier, nearly $400,000, and an arrogant town council will have to admit that their "line-by-line" review of the project scope was, well, not very thorough or thoughtful and driven by their engineer's self-enriching influence.

The Washington Department of Ecology, the agency providing the $5 million loan, has indicated a willingness to let the project slow down a bit while the community explores other funding options; Coulee Dam, even in the face of this flexibility, has decided to stay on "their" schedule. After all, if their engineer can finish over-designing the project, they will make more money initially and again if there is a redesign! Meanwhile, Elmer City begins exploring alternates of their own — alternates that may prove more cost-effective for them, but would add another 25 percent to the Coulee Dam sewer charges, pushing the Coulee Dam rate to well over $100 per month for every homeowner and customer.

Meanwhile, the Coulee Dam attorney (in the face of his own conflicts-of-interest as the former attorney for Elmer City), finds it productive to disparage my efforts as those of a disgruntled citizen ... I guess not realizing that community activism is part of a "right!" All-in-all, government at its best! Government steeped in stubborn arrogance and an ignorance of the better good!

Traditions for every day

As we've settled into the school year, our house, like houses across America, has settled into a routine. Certain days call for certain activities, and many hours of each day fall into expected patterns. One of the first things that my daughter will ask in the mornings is, "Mommy, what are we doing today?" She's always happiest when it is a day that she knows what to expect.

Children take their cues on what to expect from their lives from their parents. But it is not just our job to demonstrate how to get to school on time or what to tick off on the to-do list, it is also up to us, as parents, to demonstrate what we value in our days and in our lives.

With the advent of the holiday season, I think it is important to remember that it is not just the daily routines and traditions that are important to pass along to our children, but the seasonal one's as well.

So much of what drives the seasonal fluctuations in our lives are our traditions: what we eat, where we go, whom we visit, what to expect.

For me, the holidays are about so much more than just one day. It is about a thousand tiny daily rituals that add up to an entire season full of extra sparkle. It is about smoking a turkey and making my mother's stuffing. It is about sitting around a laughing table with loved ones and sharing a thankful meal. It is about finding the perfect tree and stringing colorful lights upon it. It is about setting up the train set and baking cookies, wrapping presents and finding the right gift for every person on my list.

One of my favorite traditions is sitting down with my family and making tamales, a tradition passed down from my great-grandmother who immigrated from Mexico. One hundred years later, her descendants still sit around a large table together every holiday season and carefully make this delicious meal. As with many holiday traditions, it is more than the lure of a tasty meal that draws us to return to this tradition. It is about being with family and continuing a long and cherished tradition. It is about making new memories and sharing old ones, retelling tales we hear almost every year, yet still make us laugh or cry.

As my daughter gets older, I delight in passing down these traditions, sharing in these seasonal rituals, and adding to them. I know each year we add to our own traditions to remember for future years, sitting around a table and laughing at the memory of this year.

At the start of every holiday season, I recognize that in a blink of an eye it will be over. I also know that the week after the holidays are over, I will experience a simultaneous sigh of relief that it is back to business as usual and a sigh of regret that it all passed so quickly.

Next week, before we are bombarded by the sparsely excess of December, I hope to take a moment for a day of appreciation, a word that takes on new meaning with each passing year. What we experience and expect each holiday season may be tied up in small, daily rituals, but it is the larger seasonal traditions that drive us and in the end, tie us together.

Fred Anthony

Fred Anthony, 84, passed away quietly and peacefully in the early morning hours of Wednesday, Nov. 7, 2012, at home and on his beloved Okanogan River property, which he had loved and where he had lived for 40 years.

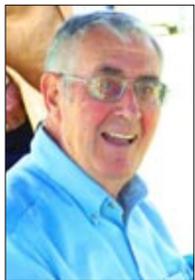

Fred was born in Spokane (Hillyard), Washington, July 25, 1928, at his grandmother's house. Fred was the fifth child of 10 born to James Fredrick Anthony and Jamima Ann Hodgen. Fred was a happy addition to his family and was readily accepted by his older brother and sisters.

Fred's early days were spent on the "old homestead" in Kartar, Wash., riding horses, working in the garden, and sometimes just being a nuisance. He was the one who always livened up the party. Fred truly loved Kartar and often in his later years could be heard bragging that he was "raised in Kartar". Those who didn't know where Kartar was assumed that it was some exotic place in the world. And the way Fred felt about it, there was no place better in the world than Kartar Valley. Early on, the family moved to Nespelem so that the older kids could attend school there. Fred attended elementary, junior high, and high school in Nespelem, and graduated in 1947.

The following September, finding that he had nothing to do, Fred walked into Nespelem School on the first day of September and started another year of high school. His brother George, called it "Fred's post graduate year of high school". He was on the football and basketball teams plus took part in the plays and dramas during his high school years. As could be imagined he was the "star".

In 1948 he joined the U.S. Army and served for almost four years, making several voyages to Turkey in ships loaded with horses and mules for the Turkish army. Fred was one of fifteen hundred troops who were provided only a rain coat and sunglasses on the sands of the island of the atoll Enewetok during the testing of two atom bombs.

After four years in the service, Fred returned to the Coulee Dam area where he worked in the timber as well as a farmhand on the Roy Kunz Ranch and the Raymond Green Ranch. Those jobs generated a lifestyle and friendships for life and the Greens became family to him.

Fred was driving school bus in Nespelem when Julie arrived in 1971 to be a kindergarten teacher. At age 46, after living what many people would call a full life already, Fred married Julie Lilienquist on August 3, 1974. Two years later, son Fredrick Scott was born and Ryan Craig followed a year and a half later. Fred became a "Mr. Mom" long before it was fashionable and during those years Fred and his two blonde haired boys milked cows, fed calves, chased chickens, went to the livestock market and swam the Okanogan River as Fred taught them life lessons and passed on to them his love of land and animals.

In fact he was such a "master teacher" both boys stayed out of school for an extra year to learn all that Fred had to teach them. After they finally started school, Fred became a bus driver for Omak School District. He loved his bus #13 and the kids he hauled to and from school each day, plus the friendships he formed in the bus garage, the school district and with families of his "riders". He was awarded "Bus Driver of the Year" in about 1986. He retired, after having a heart attack in 1990. He spent the remaining years on his beloved property hobby farming, raising pheasants and exotic birds, and enjoying his family.

Fred is survived by his wife Julie, his two sons Scott of Omak and Ryan and wife Carrie of Ritzville, as well as a beloved 9-year-old grandson Brett Ryan Anthony and step-grandsons Dylan Stanley and Caleb Stanley also of Ritzville. He is also survived by his remaining brother George and wife Joan of Ramah, New Mexico.

He is preceded in death by his parents James and Jamima Anthony, and his siblings Albert, Loren, Eleanor Graves, Myrtle Rinker, Marjorie, Lila Eunice Johansen, William, and Jay.

A memorial service will be held at the Okanogan Agriplex, Okanogan Fairgrounds at 10:30 a.m., on Thursday, November 15, 2012, a lunch will follow at noon. Burial will be at 3 p.m., that afternoon at the Nespelem Cemetery on Nespelem Flat.

Laramie and Stanczak named All CWL 2B North

by John R. McNeil II

Danielle Laramie and Tanecia Stanczak were both selected by the coaches to the First Team All Central Washington North Volleyball team. These two seniors played great seasons and were recognized by the coaches for their efforts. Laramie became the leader for the Lady Raiders during the mid-season swing, which saw Lake Roosevelt climb up to challenge Liberty Bell and Bridgeport for playoff spots. Laramie's serving and all-around abilities on the court lifted teammates and invigorated the team to new heights of success. Next season, Head Coach Nate Piturachsattit will look for someone to step up to fill Laramie's shoes. Tanecia Stanczak really came alive as the season progressed, becoming a force in the middle. She overcame an early season injury, returning a stronger more confident player, slamming down kills and keeping all avenues open for her team to win. Stanczak's play at the net filled the hole left from the graduation of Roweena Antone, which the Lady Raiders needed. Piturachsattit said he was proud of the way Stanczak rose to the challenge during the run for district.

Waters, DeWinkler make all-league teams

by John R. McNeil II

Five Raider football players have been recognized this week by league coaches, and two were chosen for both offense and defense. The coaches of the Central Washington 2B League got together last week to name the outstanding players of the season who deserve to be recognized with "all league" honors. The coaches selected seniors Sean Waters and Justus DeWinkler for both the all-league second-team offense and defense. Waters overcame an injury and a position change on offense to earn the honor on offense; and played hard on defense, providing inside pressure from his end spot. DeWinkler had a great season, running the ball with several 100-yard games. He successfully filled the vacancy made in the backfield created from Nick Gleason's transfer. On defense, DeWinkler was in on many tackles and helped Waters in providing leadership during the tough times this season. As a Punter DeWinkler improved as the season went on, and booted a 50-plus yard punt in the Bridgeport game to pin the Mustangs inside their own 20. The rest of the Raiders are on the CWL 2B Honorable Mention defense. Drew Saxon made it for defensive line as his play improved over the course of the season to where he was a threat to the quarterback on passing plays and forcing fumbles. Freshman Jesse Louie made it for his play at linebacker, where he was a constant run threat to opposing teams and was in on many tackles every game. Desmond House was selected for the honor for his play as a defensive back. House made solid gains this season with his play-making abilities grabbing interceptions and preventing too many deep passes. Those three will all be returning next season and will look to fill the voids left by Waters, DeWinkler and the rest of the seniors.

Coulee Cops

Compiled from police files

Grand Coulee Police

11/5 - A man on Second Street in Electric City told police that a man who borrowed his roto-tiller hadn't returned it and he thinks it may have been sold. He also told police that a number of items have gone missing, including several watches. The man said he tried to contact the person he loaned the tiller to, and got a nasty text back from the man's wife's mother.

- A woman told police that music coming from a source on Main Street was too loud. The officer went to the site and his report stated that he could barely hear from 20 feet away. He told the party of the complaint and they said they would keep the music turned down.

- Police checked on a report of a suspicious person on Main Street who was not wearing a shirt and had blood all over him. Police finally contacted a woman behind Loepps Furniture who reported that her son had been in a fight with a friend and was afraid that he had killed the friend. She said her son was in hiding. Police tried, but couldn't find the son, but found the man who was beaten up, who said the two were best of friends and he didn't want to press charges. He said it all started with playful fighting outside. The police report stated that both parties had been drinking.

11/6 - A woman living at Park Avenue in Electric City reported that her grandson was being harassed by verbal, Facebook and text messages. She gave police the name of the person.

- A man on Second Street in Electric City told police that two boys were staying in a vacant house and they shouldn't be there.

- A woman on Dill Avenue reported that someone was living in a motorhome parked nearby. Police knocked on the door of the motorhome but couldn't raise anyone, and the officer told the reporting party that if someone continued to live in the motorhome to call again.

11/7 - Two victims suffered attacks by a brownish-tan pit bull. One had her pant leg ripped but the attack didn't break the skin. Officers found this victim at the library. Then they were informed of another attack, the victim of which was at the hospital. In this instance the victim had bite marks on the thigh and scratch marks and said the attack occurred near Center School. Police saw the animal near Flo's Cafe, but couldn't catch it.

- An employee at a local restaurant told police that a male worker had inappropriately touched her and continued to do so, and when the owner of the restaurant was notified that he didn't believe it. She said she wasn't going to return to work there.

- An Inchelium man was stopped for having expired tabs in Electric City and, when asked for his license, registration and proof of insurance, told the officer that he didn't have any of that. In fact the man was suspended. He was cited and told he had 15 days to make a court appearance and a passenger with a valid license took over the car.

11/8 - A woman called police from a Hill Avenue apartment, saying that someone was playing music too loud. The officer stood outside the suspect apartment but stated in his report that he could hear music but it didn't appear too loud. Nevertheless he talked with the apartment occupant, who stated that the loud music was probably from another apartment.

11/9 - A driver was stopped because of defective lights. A language barrier prevented the officer from being able to communicate with the driver that her insurance wasn't up to date. A telephone connection with someone who spoke Spanish informed the woman of the problem. She received a citation.

- Someone reported a cell phone being stolen at an address on Goodfellow in Electric City but the officer responding discovered that the address doesn't exist.

- An Electric City woman told police that she didn't want to return a call asking for information about a party because she would be charged for the call. The call was from a collection agency that was trying to find out information on a person.

- A landlord checked on a renter on Federal Avenue and when he looked through a window he saw the tenant stretched out on the bed. He advised police that he thought the renter was dead. Police checked and found the man was dead and called for the medical examiner who reported that he thought the man died from natural causes. An autopsy was planned.

- An Electric City man was arrested for violation of a no-contact order. Someone came to take charge of the man's vehicle.

11/10 - A Nespelem man was stopped because of loud exhaust system and the officer could smell alcohol coming from the vehicle. In a search police found a baggie of marijuana in his front pocket and open beer containers in the car. He was cited for driving under the influence, possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia, having an open container of beer in the vehicle and having no insurance. The car was impounded and the man released to his father.

- Police responded to a report of a large fight going on at a residence on First & "B" Streets and found a number of people who had been invited to an after-hours party. A bartender at Wolf's Den Tavern told police that when she got to the residence, there were some men going through the owners' things and the owner had stated that two people had assaulted her. The house was in disarray when the officer arrived and the owner of the house was on a bed and unresponsive. An ambulance was called and took the woman to the hospital where it was reported that her blood alcohol measured .452 -- more than five times the level considered legally intoxicated. Police are still trying to find those who reportedly assaulted the woman.

- A man living on Cardinal Road NE will get a citation in the mail for running his "goat cart" on a public road while his license was suspended.

11/12 - A man who had threatened a police officer and his family stopped by the police station to apologize, saying he was drunk at the time and didn't mean it.

Coulee Dam Police

11/5 - A driver was stopped when an officer noticed that her vehicle tabs had expired. The officer found that she had a suspended license and couldn't produce registration and proof of insurance. She was cited on the suspended license and her sister came to take charge of the vehicle. She was warned on the registration and insurance.

11/6 - Barking dogs brought an officer to a house on River Drive. The owner of the two German shepherd dogs was told to keep the dogs quiet. He said he would.

11/7 - An officer assisted Grand Coulee on a reported burglary call. Later it was determined to be just a dispute between two neighbors on King Street.

- A driver was stopped and issued a ticket on Crest Drive when an officer noted that his license tabs had expired in July.

11/8 - An officer with backup from Grand Coulee checked on an alarm problem at the state licensing agency at city hall. A town employee disarmed the alarm and the two searched the building but couldn't find anything amiss.

11/9 - A man called to relate that he had taken his eyes off the road for an instant and ran into a power pole in the Lake Roosevelt High School parking lot. The officer responding noticed a ground wire hanging loose and advised a city employee of the problem. There was about $200 damage to the pole and wire and about $750 to the vehicle.

- A woman reported a large dog running loose on the Coulee Dam bridge. The officer took a digital photo of the dog and followed it to a house on North Columbia Avenue where the owner let it in the house. The owner of the dog was told it was against the law to allow a dog to run loose.

Damp October brings November snow

If the presence of snow indicates winter's arrival along with less daylight, I'd say winter is here. So far, here at the home weather station, we've had 1.9 inches of snow with rapid melt-off. We've had three days of low temperatures below the freeze level, too. The coldest being 21.6°F. More of those to come, I'm sure. Here's a tip of the hat to winter.

November can be cold and the records show that in 1985 we had a -10°F. Our mean temperature is 37.5°F. Mean precipitation is 1.25 inches and snowfall is 1.4 inches. The highest snowfall occurred in 1955 with 17.5 inches.

The last half of October was wet, bringing a total of 1.15 inches of precipitation. The mean for October is 0.71 inches. That moisture was welcomed following our dry summer. We had 12 days with lows in the 30°F range and our high for the month was a 78.6°F on Oct. 1. Our big wind gust was on Oct. 19, with a gust of 44 mph in the early evening.

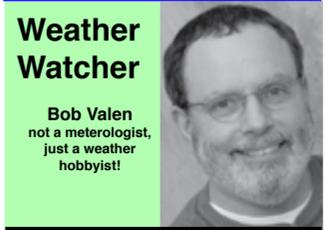

As I followed Hurricane Sandy recently, I did a little research into the history of weather forecasts broadcasted by radio. We are fortunate here in the United States, as are many other developed countries, that we access to a number of weather-related information sources 24 hours day. Information is available via radio and television, and there are applications (apps) for smart phones and tablets like the iPad. Here in the United States, the first weather forecast broadcast on radio was in Madison, Wis., transmitted by the "new" radio station 9XM. These first weather forecasts were transmitted via Morse code, starting on Dec. 4, 1916. On Jan. 3, 1921, the first audio or voice weather forecast was made by this same station. Today that radio station is WHA 970 AM.

When we have a clear night sky, you may want to look upward. Jupiter will be bright in the night sky through November. Also visible are Mars, Neptune and Uranus in the evening sky. If you want to view the last Solar Eclipse of the year, travel to Australia, where, on Nov. 14, a total eclipse of the sun will be fully visible in the morning. The Leonid meteor shower should peak early morning Nov. 17. Watch for a full Moon on the 28th.
