Fire updates

The Cayuse Mountain fire near Wellpinit on the Spokane Indian reservation was reported as 85 percent contained Tuesday. The fire had destroyed 14 houses and nine other structures, and had burned over 18,714 acres. The fire started Aug. 21, and 422 fire personnel have been assigned to the blaze that started when the Hart Fire jumped the Spokane River arm of Lake Roosevelt. That fire burned nearly 5,000 acres, 14 residences and 25 outbuildings. The Porcupine Bay Campground, day-use area, and boat launch reopened Monday morning, the National Park Service said.

Household hazardous waste day coming

Grand Coulee Dam area residents may dispose of household hazardous waste for free, Friday, Sept. 9, from noon to 4 p.m. at the Delano Regional Transfer Station. Only hazardous waste generated by households will be accepted.

Town not interested in USBR bid

Coulee Dam will not offer a bid to provide police services to the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation at Grand Coulee Dam. Mayor Greg Wilder said requirements of the latest call for bids would cause the town to lose money, a far cry from the earliest contracts that saw local police departments provided with equipment and cars, plus money for more officers. Wilder had asked the town council a month ago if anyone thought the contract should be pursued. He said at last Wednesday's council meeting that no one on the council seemed any more interested than he was.

Lake going down

The Bureau of Reclamation has started its annual fall draw-down of Lake Roosevelt to help fish migration downstream and boaters should be aware of the lowering lake, the agency warned on its Facebook page. "If you are planning to go out on the Lake this weekend please be aware of the elevation of your desired boat launch," their post says, noting that some boat launches are already dry and others that are shallow could be dry after a day on the lake, leaving boaters with no way to trailer their boats.

The fish pens in Electric City have a pair of new managers. Greg Anderson, left, and Bob Meeker have already started and replace long-time retiring manager Carl Russell. The two are asking for volunteers and both have been active in the fish feeding program. The fish pens will receive some 150,000 rainbow trout in October.

Pair taking over managing fish- raising project

by Roger S. Lucas

The fish pens in Electric City have a new manager, in fact a pair of them. Carl Russell, who has managed the fish pens for the past 25 years and is retiring, said last week that Greg Anderson and Bob Meeker have agreed to co-manage the popular fish net pen operation that raises hundreds of thousands of fish each year, supporting the local sport-fishing economy. Both have been involved in P.O.W.E.R. (Promoters of Wildlife and Environmental Resources) for some time, especially in the feeding program. Russell, at 79, said earlier this year that it was time to step down. The organization has had some trouble getting someone to step up and take charge of the fish pen program. The two will cooperate in leading the volunteers needed to keep the fish-feeding program viable. Anderson, a former appraiser for Ferry County, and before that a machinist, has lived here for two years. Meeker has lived in the area for 14 years and uses this as his base for troubleshooting for major companies that have problems. "I am a fix-it person," he laughed. Both Anderson and Meeker have put out a call for volunteers. Russell added his voice to the need for volunteers. "The program is run with volunteers, and we need some people to share some time with us," Russell stated. The two new managers stepped forward just in time. The fish nets expect about 150,000 new rainbow trout fingerlings in mid-October. These fish will be released into Banks Lake sometime in March. The fish pen operation has a lot to do with the success of Banks Lake as a fishery. It is one of the most popular fishing sites in the state and adds much to the community's economy. If you are willing to volunteer some fish feeding

by Scott Hunter

Coulee Dam instructed the town's attorney last week to file a lawsuit against Elmer City for breach of a decades-old contract between the two towns, saying Elmer City isn't paying its bills. Following an executive session of the town council Wednesday night, the council voted unanimously to sue. Mayor Greg Wilder said Elmer City was in arrears at least $55,000 in charges Coulee Dam has billed for processing the smaller town's sewage, more if certain capitalized costs are included. "They've overcharged us for labor for years," Elmer City Mayor Gail Morin said Thursday morning, adding that Coulee Dam has also been trying to bill for those capital costs, which she said aren't allowed by the contract.

"For the past 38 years, we were subsidizing Coulee Dam's wage distribution a little at a time," Morin contended. She said Elmer City had received a $64,000 bill last month that included charges for a new pickup, past engineering studies on Elmer City's "smelly sewage," and for land Coulee Dam bought nearby in preparation to build a new wastewater treatment plant. Elmer City decided to pay just sewer treatment operating costs, about $9,300, she said. Morin claimed Coulee Dam has billed based on operating costs that include 100 percent of the plant operator's time, but she said he doesn't spend all his time at the plant. She said Elmer City had never been billed for capital costs before Wilder took over as mayor.

LR schools start with new leaders

by Roger S. Lucas

Students of Lake Roosevelt Schools will return to classrooms Tuesday, Sept. 6, and will be welcomed by a number of new leaders. Superintendent Paul Turner will begin his first year as the education leader, replacing Dennis Carlson, who retired June 30. Turner was assistant high school principal last year. Taking over as principal at Lake Roosevelt High School is Mark Herndon, from the Cape Flattery School District where he was principal of Clallam Bay K-12. Herndon had been hired as assistant principal at the high school, but was elevated when principal Ronanda Liberty took a position at Ritzville. Hired as dean of students at the high school is Charles Pierce, who comes to Lake Roosevelt from the Soap Lake District. On the elementary side, Margo Piver has been hired to the assistant principal position. She comes

Concerns on crime stated

by Scott Hunter

A fairly upbeat report on crime statistics in Coulee Dam didn't assuage fears among residents who expressed dire concerns at the town council meeting about increasing petty crime. Mayor Greg Wilder recited findings from USA.com, a site that compiles all kinds of statistics, but invoked the Mark Twain quote that there are "lies, damned lies and statistics." That site noted last year that the town had the second-best record in the state. But Wilder said he'd also compiled stats from state sources on nearby towns and that Coulee Dam still looked very good by comparison. Nevertheless, citizens said, things have taken a turn for the worse. Larry Price, who lives on Til-mus Street, said his neighborhood has seen "a lot of wanderers" who look over property and seem to assess open garages and more. "We're going to have to do something to protect our citizens," said another speaker, who asked not to be identified because she feared retaliation. "It's out of hand. ... It's not just Coulee Dam's problem; it's the whole entire community's problem." "It's a serious issue," Wilder said. Interim Police Chief Larry Hall said some of the people caus-

A day of the big planes

Two large airplanes were on the tarmac at the local airport last Thursday morning. One, a Metroliner owned by the Army Corps of Engineers out of Omaha, Nebraska, and the other a King Air 350 that brought a number of Bonneville Power Administration officials from Portland for a tour of Grand Coulee Dam. The Metroliner is configured for 19 passengers and brought a group of Army Corps officials for a tour of Chief Joseph Dam. Later, a second King Air plane arrived from Boise to transport a number of Bureau of Reclamation officials for a tour of Grand Coulee Dam. — Roger S. Lucas photo

Grand Coulee to seek lighting grant

by Roger S. Lucas

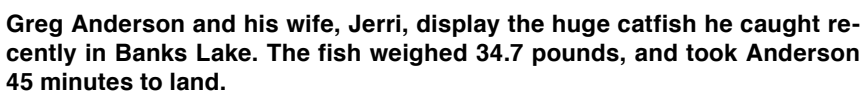

Grand Coulee is going to move forward and seek a grant to install LED street lights throughout the city, Mayor Paul Townsend said last week. The issue was brought up by public works Director Dennis Francis at the August 16 city council meeting. Francis told the council that the city regularly spends about $2,708 a month ($33,355 a year) on power to illuminate its many street lights. He estimated that the city could save about 30-40 percent of what it now spends by installing LED (light emitting diode) lights. Francis said Friday that the savings could be as high as 50 percent. Townsend said the city has a lot of things going on, but with a potential savings like that he would like to get it done as quickly as a grant would allow. Francis said he is working on applying for a Transportation Improvement Board "Relight Washington" LED grant. "I have to wait until I get a PUD rate set up for

LED lighting. Right now the PUD doesn't have a rate category for LEDs," Francis said. The town of Coulee Dam installed LED street lights through a pilot grant. In 2012, the last full year before installing the new lights, the town had spent $10,646.69 for street lighting costs. Town Clerk Stefani Bowden said Coulee Dam reduced its street light energy costs by about 63 percent, and the cost continues to come down. In Coulee Dam, street lighting cost was $3,921.14 in 2015, and it is estimated it will come down to about $3,600 in 2016, Bowden stated. In addition to the power savings, LED lights take less maintenance and the bulbs last longer. Residents at a Coulee Dam town council meeting Aug. 24, however, complained that the new lights don't provide enough light in the shadows. The comments came during a discussion on local crime.

OPINION

Something is definitely amiss

People at last week’s Coulee Dam Town Council meeting speaking up about local crime were stating out loud what we’re all feeling: the community is not as safe as it once was.

There have been times in the last three decades when petty crimes spiked in the local area, only to recede after one or two arrests. This may be different. It feels different.

In the past, the local petty crime rate would rise and fall depending on which thief just got out of jail. Police knew where to find him or her, and it was only a matter of time before the repeat offender was caught again. Now it seems to be a matter of more time, for more of them. This week’s Coulee Cops column contains 16 reports of property crimes, an astounding number.

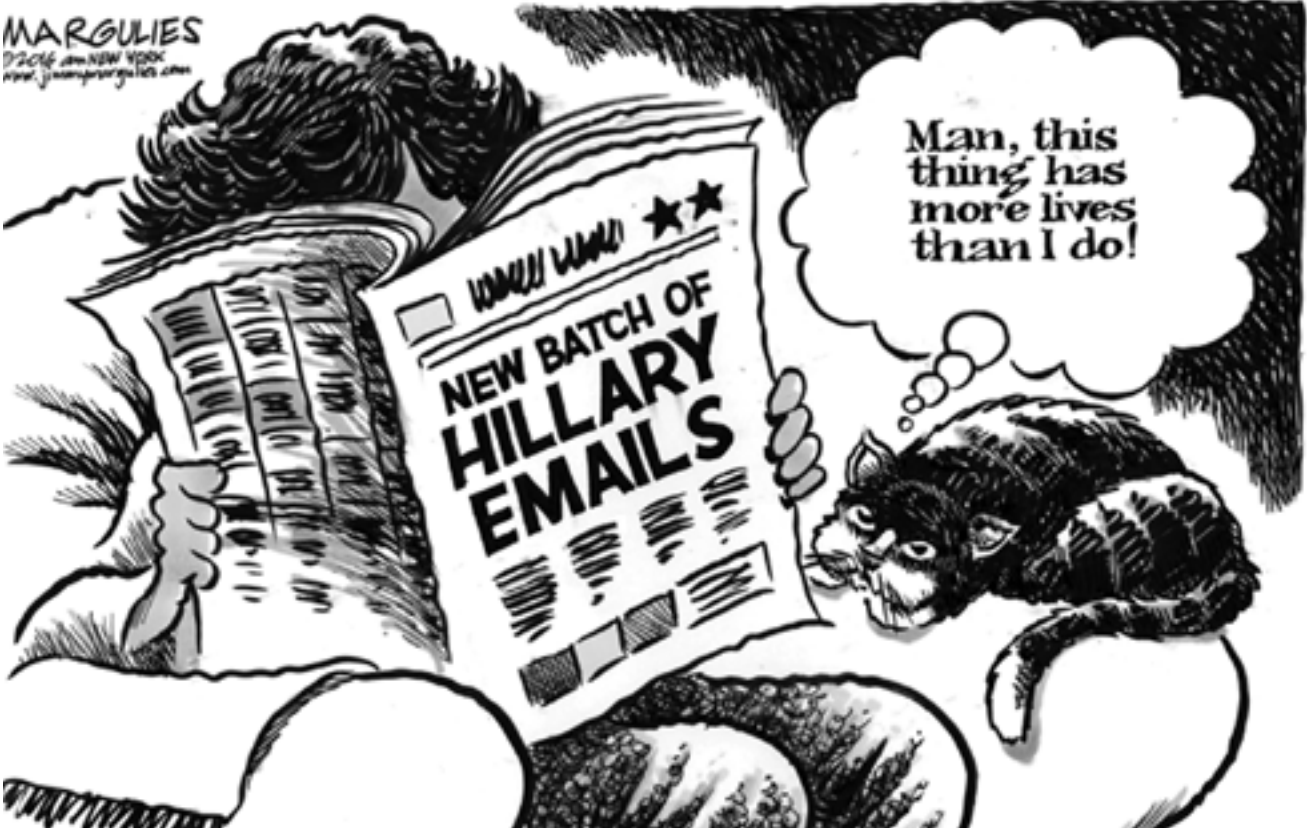

One person recently remarked that we need to do something before people start getting hurt, an ominous comment that could be taken to either have the welfare of the innocent in mind, or the safety of a whole community in which, feeling unsafe, some citizens decide to take matters into it their own hands.

That consequence could lead to some OK creative solutions, but it can also lead to brutish behavior gaining acceptance in a community that feels it can no longer depend on what Hobbs called the “leviathan,” that political creature to which we each surrender power for our mutual protection — our government, our police who alone have the legitimate power of arrest.

We’re a very long way from anarchy, of course, but it is interesting and a little unnerving to see it peak its head above the distant horizon of a small community that not long ago could spot a newcomer as the one who locked his car door before going into the grocery store.

Letters from Our Readers

B Street not the cause of today’s problems

Jess, I have read some strange comments from you, but this one takes the cake and demands a reply. Are you and the other people serious about thinking “B Street” has been the reason for the crime and degradation in our area, a cloud over the town?

“B Street” was just a street like any other street in town. My mother and grandmother both worked on B Street during the 30s. My grandmother made pies and potato salad by the tubs at a bakery, and my mother washed clothes six days a week at the local laundry while my dad and grandfather worked at the dam.

Does the fact that they worked on B Street mean I tend to lie, cheat, rob, steal, and do drugs? Certainly not! They worked there as good, hard-working women, and I have never felt the need to be corrupt. In fact, I feel that my family, friends, and acquaintances in the area are mostly law-abiding people.

The choice of our lifestyle is ours, not the influence of a street that catered to hard-working construction workers who had no place to go. The morals of our community reflect the morals of our nation, and I am positive that B Street has absolutely no influence over the rest of the country.

Reasons listed against lake trail and water park behind private homes

It would not open up Electric City for potential growth, as the city has said they wanted. It opens private homes for burglary, vandalism, and there is no safety in this for children. (The Star reports we have plenty of crime already.)

A neighborhood is not a place to put a water park because back yard and front yard privacy is eliminated and the neighborhood becomes congested with parking and noise; and it is no longer safe for children to walk and ride their bikes. Not everyone works from 9 to 5. Some work different shifts and weekends.

Taxes for the whole community of Electric City would have to be increased because we do not have the law enforcement manpower needed to patrol the current proposed trail and water park in front of private homes. Police protection contract would have to be renegotiated. Neither is there enough manpower to maintain the trail for safety and sanitation.

Build a board walk-fishing dock between Coulee Playland and North Dam, and utilize the walking trails this area has, as well as at Osborn Bay. Place the water park in North Dam Park. It is centrally located for the greater coulee community members, as well as visitors; offering plenty of parking space room for family reunions, walks, picnics, etc. (as well as the laser light show fishing, swimming, boating, etc.) because visitors traveling through can readily see the board walk-fishing dock and water park – stop, enjoy and spend their money.

Roll on, Columbia River Treaty negotiations

Anyone who has spent time in Central Washington knows the Columbia River is the defining natural feature of our region. As the largest river in the Western Hemisphere that flows into the Pacific Ocean, it has long guided the way of life for people living in the Pacific Northwest. From water storage and transportation to recreation, flood control, energy production, and wildlife habitat, our management of the Columbia River will continue to determine the economic future of our region.

We share this magnificent resource with our neighbor to the north, which is why updating the treaty between the U.S. and Canada to govern the Columbia should be a top priority for the federal government. Unfortunately, instead of expediting this important matter, this administration has been dragging its feet on the necessary review process for commencing Columbia River Treaty (CRT) negotiations.

The CRT was implemented in 1964 to manage electricity generation and flood control, and it has not been updated since then, despite significant developments in the intervening five decades. One example of the many major provisions that require modernization is the “Canadian Entitlement.” The original treaty now requires U.S. ratepayers in the Pacific Northwest to provide an entitlement of $250 million to $350 million for hydroelectric power to Canada. The purpose of the entitlement was to compensate Canada for flood control and storage measures, though it is based on severely outdated treaty assumptions. The Canadian Entitlement needs to be revisited and rebalanced in a way that is fair for ratepayers and electricity consumers in the U.S.

Renegotiating the CRT is important for the Northwest, but why the rush? The bipartisan, bicameral congressional effort to nudge the administration into action began in 2014 because that is when the clock started ticking on the life of this treaty. On Sep. 16, 2024, with 10 years notice, either Canada or the U.S. can terminate most of the treaty’s provisions. We are already well into the 10-year timeframe when proposed modifications must be legally noticed. Since I have been in Congress, I have joined my congressional colleagues in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and Montana on numerous occasions to urge the administration and the lead agency for negotiations, the U.S. Department of State, to complete the necessary review process and begin treaty negotiations immediately. While a new lead U.S. negotiator was finally appointed last fall, there has still been very little progress.

Time is running out to modernize the outdated treaty that governs the 1,200-mile-long Columbia and impacts millions of Americans in the Pacific Northwest. There is much at stake, and this is a complex matter, but I will continue to apply pressure on this administration to make modernization a priority this year.

Raiders show good signs in pre-season football jamboree

by Jacob Wagner

The Raider football team showed a lot of promise on Saturday when they played Bridgeport in a pre-season “jamboree.”

The Raiders scored three touchdowns, while only allowing one during the series of short scrimmages against Manson and Bridgeport.

Sophomore quarterback Steven Flowers threw a touchdown pass to senior wide receiver Nathaniel Hall. Junior running back Beau Michel ran in a touchdown. Flowers ran the third touchdown in himself, showing that he is a dual-threat QB capable of both passing and running.

On the defensive end, defensive back Elijah Harris had two sacks and four tackles for a loss, and recovered a fumble. Hall, in addition to his touchdown re-to Lake Roosevelt from the Walla Walla District.

New leaders

The new athletic director is Levi Seekins, a former graduate of Lake Roosevelt High School, who returns to his alma mater from California. He replaces Richard Black, who resigned to take a position on the school board. Seekins was also hired as head basketball coach at Lake Roosevelt High School by the board Monday night.

Superintendent Turner said he expects nearly 700 students when Tuesday rolls around. He told the school board Monday night that many of the classrooms are maxed out and all available classrooms will be occupied.

“We have a huge enrollment in the second and fifth grades,” Turner noted.

Before-school activities include an all-grade open house barbecue tonight (Wednesday) from 5-7 p.m., and the public is invited.

“Come and look the school over and have a hot dog,” Turner suggested.

Childfind Screening Applications Available At School District Office

Birth to age five preschool children not currently enrolled in the Grand Coulee Dam School District may be eligible for a free developmental screening. Interested parents should request forms for a developmental screening and health inventory from the School District Office. It is especially important for a parent to complete the forms if they think their child may be developmentally delayed, i.e. be in need of occupational/physical or speech therapy, or other possible health problems that may impede a child from being ready for learning. Completed forms need to be returned to the District Office.

Completed forms submitted by parents/guardians will be reviewed and a determination will be made as to whether the child needs to be scheduled for additional Childfind Screening and/or assessments.

Parents/guardians will be notified of results of the developmental screening as soon as possible. Parents/guardians of children considered in need of additional services will be notified to schedule further assessments.

To request developmental screenings and health inventory forms please call Debbie Van Geystel at 633-2143 Monday-Thursday from 7:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA)

The Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA) (20 U.S.C. § 1232g; 34 CFR Part 99) is a Federal law that protects the privacy of student education records. The law applies to all schools that receive funds under an applicable program of the U.S. Department of Education.

FERPA gives parents certain rights with respect to their children’s education records. These rights transfer to the student when he or she reaches the age of 18 or attends a school beyond the high school level. Students to whom the rights have transferred are “eligible students.”

*Parents or eligible students have the right to inspect and review the student’s education records maintained by the school. Schools are not required to provide copies of records unless, for reasons such as great distance, it is impossible for parents or eligible students to review the records. Schools may charge a fee for copies.

*Parents or eligible students have the right to request that a school correct records, which they believe to be inaccurate or misleading. If the school decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student then has the right to a formal hearing. After the hearing, if the school still decides not to amend the record, the parent or eligible student has the right to place a statement with the record setting forth his or her view about the contested information.

*Generally, schools must have written permission from the parent or eligible student in order to release any information from a student’s education record. However, FERPA allows schools to disclose those records, without consent, to the following parties or under the following conditions (34 CFR § 99.31):

- * School officials with legitimate educational interest;
- * Other schools to which a student is transferring;
- * Specified officials for audit or evaluation purposes;
- * Appropriate parties in connection with financial aid to a student;
- * Organizations conducting certain studies for or on behalf of the school;
- * Accrediting organizations;
- * To comply with a judicial order or lawfully issued subpoena;
- * Appropriate officials in cases of health and safety emergencies; and
- * State and local authorities, within a juvenile justice system, pursuant to specific State law.

Schools may disclose, without consent, “directory” information such as a student’s name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, honors and awards, and dates of attendance. However, schools must tell parents and eligible students about directory information and allow parents and eligible students a reasonable amount of time to request that the school not disclose directory information about them. Schools must notify parents and eligible students annually of their rights under FERPA.

The right to file a complaint with the U.S. Department of Education concerning alleged failures by the District to comply with the requirements of FERPA. The name and address of the Office that administers FERPA is:

Family Policy Compliance Office
U.S. Department of Education
600 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20202-4605s
