City supports health district

After a presentation by Grant County Health District's Jeffrey Ketchel, the Electric City council voted to give the district $2,000. The district had asked for $2 per resident or $2,000 from the city to help with its outside expenses.

And senior meals

The Grand Coulee Senior Meal program is the beneficiary of a $2,000 donation from the city of Electric City as the result of council action last Tuesday night. The meals program report stated that it provides 200 meals a month to seniors in Electric City alone.

Church to offer Thanksgiving dinner

The Church of the Nazarene will hold its community Thanksgiving dinner from 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 24, at the Senior Center, according to Pastor Adrian Harris.

Write-off allowed

The Coulee Dam Town Council agreed to write off $1,290 of uncollectible ambulance fees at its meeting last Wednesday night. The recommendation to write off the fees was made by HealthCare Management Associates, the firm that does the billing of ambulance fees for the town. The $1,290 write-off constitutes two charges.

Town budget workshop set

The town of Coulee Dam will hold a 2014 budget workshop at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Dec. 4, in the council chambers at town hall. It will be the final workshop before the budget goes to council for approval. The council voted to cancel its next meeting, scheduled for Nov. 27, because of the Thanksgiving holiday.

Commission sets tentative budget

Grand Coulee's Civil Service Commission will ask the city to approve its request for budget money totaling $14,900 for the 2014 year. Commissioners agreed on the budget amount last Friday as they reviewed their activity for the new year.

Tab totals tinkle coffers

Electric City has raised some $4,217 through its Transportation Benefit District from April 30 through Oct. 31, a report to the council notes. The TBD allows the city to receive $10 per vehicle license applied for from applicants who reside within the city. The city plans to budget $15,000 for 2014. This is the first year the city has taken advantage of the license provision.

Revenue slippage

October was the first month this year that the Delano Transfer Station brought in less money compared to the same month in the previous year. The transfer station showed revenue of $34,532.07 in October this year compared to $35,648.11 last year. The report was made available to the Regional Board of Mayors, whose meeting Monday was cancelled due to a lack of a quorum.

Man injured in electrical accident at dam

by Scott Hunter

A Bureau of Reclamation employee was critically injured Monday as a fire started at a switch in the John W. Keys III Pump Generating Plant.

Daniel McCulloch, 54, was flown to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle with burn injuries. Another employee was treated locally for smoke inhalation.

McCulloch, an operator, has worked for the bureau since 2008. He was listed in serious condition at Harborview's intensive care unit Tuesday, a medical center spokesperson said.

All plant employees were evacuated and acrid smoke rose out of the pump generating plant just before noon Monday as multiple fire trucks were staged outside and firefighters were seen entering the building.

Reclamation's own Grand Coulee Dam fire department immediately responded and fire departments from Grand Coulee and Electric City were also called.

The pump generating plant at Grand Coulee Dam pumps water from Lake Roosevelt into Banks Lake to irrigate the 670,000-acre Columbia Basin Project. The flow can be reversed to generate electricity.

The plant contains six pumps and six pump-generators. At the time of the incident, four pumps and five pump generators were undergoing maintenance. The remaining units in the plant were not pumping water into Banks Lake or generating power, the bureau said.

A bureau press release said the accident is believed to have been caused by a switch gear failure. An investigation was to begin the following day, after airing out the building during the night.

Bureau spokesperson Lynne Brougher said Tuesday morning that samples of air inside the building and residue from surfaces were being tested for hazardous substances.

Jaci Gross named EWU Teacher of the Month

by Scott Hunter

Students and staff at Grand Coulee Dam Middle School were on pins and needles Friday morning, gathered for a special assembly with a secret subject ...

Until they saw the TV camera and anchors.

Cheers broke out as Dan Kleckner and Stephanie Vigil of KHQ TV entered the gym to bestow the Eastern Washington University Teacher of the Month honor on Jaci Gross.

Gross had been nominated by student Taylor Holeman, who called her an important part of the school and a "great community member."

Kleckner told students to think about all the teachers in eastern Washington and North Idaho who could have received the honor, but that Gross was chosen.

"I have the best job in the world," Gross told the students. "You kids are what motivates me every day to come to work. ... You know I love you. Thank you."

City keeps tourism fund policy

Only spend half

by Roger S. Lucas

Electric City's council decided last Tuesday night to stick with its policy, at least for now, on how it spends its hotel/motel tax revenues.

Its current policy puts half of its hotel/motel revenues in a reserve fund and makes the other half available to promote the area. Currently, the city has $245,416 in its hotel/motel reserve fund.

Using 2012 figures, and the amount budgeted by the city for this year, that will put $34,400 into the reserve fund and make the same amount available for promotion purposes.

Going into the promotion budget for 2014 is $5,300 for the Ridge Riders to help them promote the Colorama Rodeo and other events; $6,000 for the Coulee Area Parks and Recreation District, to help with North Dam Park; and $23,100 to the Grand Coulee Dam Area Chamber of Commerce for advertising and promotion.

Hospital in shakeup mode

Commission addressing community, staff concerns

by Scott Hunter

The top administrator at Coulee Medical Center narrowly avoided a vote of no confidence from his board Monday night, with a decision by the hospital district commission that clearly disappointed members of his staff.

In a special meeting of the Douglas, Grant, Lincoln, Okanogan Hospital District 6 commission, members voted to form a committee to immediately intervene in a deteriorating relationship between the hospital's top administrator, Scott Graham, and the medical staff, who had taken their own vote of no confidence in him Nov. 8.

With the financial climate for small hospitals becoming increasingly challenging, Graham has reportedly instituted budget tightening measures, including reductions in hours and pay for staff, which they believe is not shared by administrators. And doctors, who have for years advocated the need for another physician to share the load, say the administration won't recruit one.

The situation is critical, with a possibility the doctors could quit over the impasse.

Following a 45-minute closed session, Commissioner Geary Oliver moved for a vote of no confidence in Graham. With all four current commissioners present, the motion died for lack of a second, but Commissioner Jerry Kennedy offered an alternative.

Kennedy moved to form a two-person committee to immediately meet with the medical staff "to try to find a way through the conflict." That motion carried and President Greg Behrens appointed Kennedy and Commissioner Kris Hare to the task.

Kennedy said Tuesday afternoon that he and Hare were to meet with the doctors Tuesday night.

The space for the Monday night meeting was double its usual seating capacity and still overflowed.

With employees, and many community members, critical of hospital rates, staff reductions and an increase in administration, commissioners moved next to take a critical look at the whole issue of how resources are allo-

No answer yet on big shop size

by Roger S. Lucas

The best answer city officials could give Electric City resident Mike Dennis last Tuesday night was, it's in the works.

Dennis has been pressing the city to get changes to its master plan on the size of auxiliary buildings (metal storage sheds, shops) allowable in the city.

He asked what was happening on getting some revisions to the code and was told that the city's planner has the proposal from the city's planning commission and is still looking at it.

Dennis has appeared before the council on a regular basis trying to follow up on his request to the planning commission and city council that the maximum size of a steel building be increased to 1,720 square feet. City officials state that this is greater than the size of most houses in the city.

Dennis had received some assurances from the planning commission that they were not opposed to the change. The city sent the request to its planner so she could go through the planning code and determine how much would need to be changed before the city proceeds with the request.

City Clerk Jackie Perman has advised that the process could take up to a year for any changes to the code to be made.

Dennis wants the revision so he can put his motorhome and other recreational units inside during the winter to keep them out of the weather.

Commission studies how to hire police

by Roger S. Lucas

Grand Coulee's Civil Service Commission is still trying to decide how to continue in its efforts to test and recommend the hiring of, a new police officer.

The commission met in a special meeting Friday in an effort to schedule testing for seven applicants for a vacant patrolman position in the city.

Commissioners discussed using a testing firm, Public Safety Testing of Lynnwood, Wash., and heard a telephone conference presentation by a representative.

The discussion lasting over a half hour, produced little result and prompted commissioners to schedule another special meeting, at 5:30 p.m., this Thursday, at city hall. The decision facing commissioners is whether to go with a testing firm or order tests and give them locally.

In using a testing firm, tests are given at specific sites and local candidates are mixed with others from the region taking the same tests. The testing firm says that this increases the candidate pool for all the communities sending people to the test site.

The commission, after the testing process, whichever one they use, will send the top three candidates passing the test to the police chief for consideration.

If the test list doesn't provide a viable candidate, the commission can repeat the process and call for another round of applicants.

Coulee Pioneer Museum display marks Kennedy killing

Asks where you were when you heard

by Roger S. Lucas

If you are old enough, do you remember where you were on Nov. 22, 1963, when the nation and the world was informed that President John F. Kennedy was shot?

You can record your recollections of that date and incident at the Coulee Pioneer Museum in Electric City in a special notebook there.

The notebook was placed there along with a collection of Kennedy dolls owned by Constance Wilson, a Coulee Dam resident. The collection has attracted some attention by museum visitors.

The museum is open from 10-2 on Thursdays and Fridays.

Wilson was the first to recall where she was and how she got the news:

"I was in chemistry lab at Lathrop High School in Fairbanks, Alaska. The vice principal came to the door and beckoned the teacher over. The teacher asked us to return to our seats and then announced that the president had been shot."

Also posting a note was Electric City resident Steve Salstrom, who wrote: "I was in class at Miller Junior High in Aberdeen, Wa., when the intercom went off with the announcement."

Susan Miller, former chamber of commerce manager, wrote: "I was a junior at Grand Coulee High School when I heard."

Birdie Hensley, who coordinates activity at the museum, noted: "I was going to Edison Trade School in Seattle when I heard the news."

Marcia Warnecke wrote: "I was 10 and in school at Mansfield. We all had to go outside to lower the flag."

Linda Zlateff left her memory note: "I was in junior high at Coulee Dam. Very sad day."

Linda Esmond said she heard the announcement while in junior high in Riverside, Calif.

Judy Lynd stated: "I was in 8th grade at Coulee Dam Junior High (Columbia School) now Coulee Dam Credit Union. During break between classes went outside and there was Martha Graham Patty Kale and Pam Everts sitting on railing and crying. They told me."

Jerry Beierman stated that he was at the NAPA Auto Parts store on Main Street in Grand Coulee when he received the news.

There's plenty of time to record your place and circumstance in the museum's Kennedy log book.

There are a number of displays that should be of interest to local citizens.

USBR may open portion of trail

by Roger S. Lucas

A quarter mile long piece of the Downriver Trail system might soon be reopened, Bureau of Reclamation officials stated last week.

The trail would extend through a pedestrian gate along the riprap on the east side of the Columbia River near the bridge to just short of the Third Powerhouse. If approved, hikers could go from the north end of the trail near Seaton's Grove all the way to near the Third Powerhouse.

Public Affairs Officer Lynne Brougher said the change is being evaluated and that the agency will seek approval if everything goes well.

The portion of the trail that would be opened has been closed for the past 12 years with the security measures taken after 9/11.

On the west side of the river, the Bureau of Reclamation is planning to improve the access area on that side of the river so walkers there could better determine the area open to them.

Town's 291 new street lights to go up

Coulee Dam's council approved a $9,700 change order on its proposed LED street light project at its meeting last Wednesday night.

The change order will enable the contractor, Northwest Edison, to install 291 TRS series photo-controls with the new energy saving street lights.

The cost of the change order has been okayed by the state's Transportation Improvement Board, the organization funding the 100-percent grant.

The project will replace old street lights with LED (light-emitting diode) lights which will save the town about 60 percent of its street light energy costs.

The town of Coulee Dam is one of six communities in the state to receive the grant.

Public works director Barry Peacock said last week that the project will start early in December and take from one to two weeks to complete.

The Seattle firm, Northwest Edison, will begin work as soon as the fixtures arrive, Peacock stated.

The grant was for up to $252,000, and the bid by Northwest Edison, with the change order, will come to $137,067, according to information given the council.

The project will replace 291 lights.

Oliver said they needed to hire an independent firm to audit the last three years of financial records "to make sure we are doing things correctly," noting large differences in the last two years.

"A second set of eyes to look at not just what we're spending but how we're spending it — particularly the administrative budget," Kennedy added.

Behrens noted that a group of eight hospitals around Golden-dale were comparing each other's operations in that manner. He suggested contacting them.

Behrens said it was certainly worth looking at "what we spend on executive team, what we spend on nursing staff and what we spend on dietary ... and see how we compare to like hospitals." He appointed Kennedy and Oliver to that task.

Commissioners also decided to look into seeking legal counsel independent of that provided by the firm retained by the district since 1990, Foster, Pepper, Sheffelman, of Seattle. Behrens said the firm is a good one, but agreed with Kennedy's assertion that it may be prudent to seek a second opinion on recent matters.

Kennedy said some of the firm's recent advice had been "limiting and conservative." He noted the counsel's advice to stop offering a popular lab discount week and its assertion last week that calling the Monday special meeting, outside of a regular meeting, violated the state's Open Public Meetings Act.

That statute states: "A special meeting may be called at any time by the presiding officer of the governing body of a public agency or by a majority of the members of the governing body"

The chamber had asked for $32,000, and had the support of at least one person, Steve Salstrom, who attended the council meeting and asked members to support the full amount the chamber requested.

It was noted in discussion that if the council chooses to provide the requested amount, it could pass a budget amendment next year.

Cities that collect hotel/motel taxes are also being pressured by a new proposal that all the funds be channeled through a tourism board that could hire an advertising professional to plan the use of the money.

Zoning laws stand in the way, and that's good

Among the most frustrating regulations that citizens run up against when trying to fight city hall are zoning laws. But some of the most obvious problems this community faces result from a lack of them, or of their past enforcement.

Zones in a city define how portions of geography are to be used: homes here, businesses there, mixed use over here. Their purpose is rooted in a great American concept — that we can do what we want with our own property, as long as it doesn't interfere with anyone else's. Zoning is supposed to help make that more possible over long stretches of time that we mortals can't see beyond.

In 1858, Abraham Lincoln said, "I believe each individual is naturally entitled to do as he pleases with himself and the fruit of his labor, so far as it in no wise interferes with any other man's rights ..."

Zoning recognizes that what you do on your property affects mine right next door. If you build a 20-foot tall shop that blocks my view and so devalues my property, is that your right? If you operate a business and set a precedent for it in your home that can eventually lead to the degradation of the neighborhood long after you're gone, is that your right?

A drive around this community will let any observer easily find many areas where such principles have not been applied in the past. As a result, what often seemed like a reasonable idea at the time now renders property far less usable than it should be. Prime view lots that would make a nice place for a home can be found next to a junk yard.

Over time, this affects the whole community. At this moment in time, a growing workforce at the Bureau of Reclamation looks for homes out of town. Builders wanting to supply housing lament that they can't build a house on speculation when the mess of a lot down the street guarantees its low value.

Planning commissions in our towns need to stand their ground when it comes time to defend the prosperity of the future against expediency of the present.

Letters to the Editor

Re: "Our take on the news" Nov. 13, 2013

Reading the Nov. 13 Star newspaper editorial prompted me to this response.

Don't you find your statement about wondering what the judge will find to be ironic? One of the complaints about Mr. Picard helping his friends and neighbors came from Jack's Service.

The city of Grand Coulee granted Jack a permit to gouge the public with his monopolistic fuel prices. Now they want Mr. Picard to cease helping his family and friends so they will have to travel out of town for help. Just like many locals now have to do for their fuel needs. In the same Star issue, you mentioned that Donovan's neighbor had written a letter about what a good neighbor he is. I would like to add that every time I drive by Donovan's home I think of how much his residence has been made more beautiful than it was prior to being fixed up as nicely as Donovan and his family have done. He lives right on the highway so the whole community should be able to see the improvement.

I really hope that the judge and city of Grand Coulee can see the light on this issue. And if the people are looking for a place to buy your fuel you can still find a more affordable pump in Coulee City. I hope they don't join the club that Jack's Service and now the new owner in Wilbur have established.

Good luck, Donovan.

Lloyd Olbricht

Appalled at mechanic citation

I am appalled that the city of Grand Coulee would issue a citation and impose a fine to the mechanic and an outstanding person. He will give you the shirt off his back. The other businesses who have complained are being petty. We live next door to The Picards, and we hear nothing coming from his garage. He does not block the road, there are no signs, as my husband Mark stated before. At this point, I am ashamed of our city council and we will be there to support the Picards when his day in court does come. This is one he should win. Maybe the city should ban yard sales too; they are operating a business without a license, aren't they.

Stephanie Graves

Commissioner stood up for community

I'll make this short because most of the community knows what's been going on. After the community built a new hospital its reputation and management seems to have gotten worse.

At the last three board meetings, the number of unhappy citizens and medical staff has grown immensely to standing room only. The Hospital Board #6 was voted in by the community for the community. When Geary Oliver stood up last night and put a motion on the floor to remove the CEO of Coulee Medical Center, he was standing up for the community.

As the saying goes "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Losing arts = lost opportunities

Well, LRHS and GCD Middle school got the bands back together not long ago when they hired the new band teacher, Lisa Vaughn. I have seen her working late to get caught up after the late start. There were many of us in the community that were worried once again we will be losing an art form in our schools that will cripple the foundation of our children for years to come. Don't know what I'm talking about? Let me back up a bit.

When I was in high school, (actually not that long ago) we had drama, chorus, band, art, Native American Club, refusal skills, Natural Helpers, journalism, safety, VICA, FBLA, Junior Miss, a nursing program, and I am sure I am forgetting other clubs and/or activities. There were also at least three groups of guys I can think of that had bands. A few years earlier than that there were even more, like, VOC Club, Spanish Club, BRA (Boys Rooting Association), Drill Team and PEP Club.

I know some of these programs have evolved into other things, some are there and still going strong, but there are some missing that are still needed and leaving an empty hole not only in our kids but in our community. I can remember a few years ago when were talking about cutting some sports due to funding and the area went into an uproar, but when these other things slipped quietly away in the night we almost didn't notice.

The loss of a Drama Club is affecting us all right now. How? Planet Earth Players, heard of them? They are having a hard time getting new recruits to act in just about anything. Bravo to the Missoula Children's Theater and those that worked to get them here.

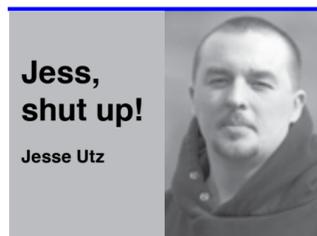

When we eliminate these programs, our kids lose a venue to hone skills, try something new, release emotions or excel at a skill when they might not have a gift in other areas. We are not all athletes and we know it, so when these other things are available, we can become victorious in other areas.

Now, I don't want this to sound like I am on a local school bashing trip, because this is happening everywhere in America. I also know that our art class has been excellent for years, and we have turned a focus on education that takes up a lot of budget and teachers' time. But we have to speak up sometime before the next piece is lost.

Can you imagine your favorite guitarist not ever being handed a guitar early in life? Or your favorite artist not being given a pencil and paper and told to go ahead and doodle today? Or your favorite actor not finding his joy on a stage? The list can go on and on. Simply, we need to give our children other outlets other than sports and video games.

So if the school cannot provide the extra curricular activities that our kids desire, we might have to do it ourselves. That could mean finding a local instructor for piano or guitar. Or volunteering to help put together a children's play. Or even finding a local artist and convincing him/her to give some tips to your budding artist. But it doesn't stop there. When we have these events in town, attend, take your whole family to enjoy Mason Marin and his band in the park, to the Planet Earth Players next production, to an art show at the Senior Center or when they having reading time at the library. Get involved and take your kids. Who knows, they may write a column some day and say some pretty nice things about you.

- Also congrats to Miss G., well deserved.
- My condolences to the Davidson Family, a true area treasure was lost last week. She will be missed.
- And my condolences to the Tonasket and Stanzacks who also lost important members of their respective families.
- And thank you, Soy Redthunder, for the letter.

Life lessons learned

Elizabeth Rangel, a 1998 graduate of Lake Roosevelt High School who now works as an outreach assistant at Highline Community College in Des Moines, Wash., spoke to local middle school and high school students Monday, divulging secrets of physical and sexual abuse she had held close while she was a teenager. Rangel, who graduated from Central Washington University while working full time and with a new daughter, said she'd led a hard life and made hard choices. "Don't tell yourself you can't do it," she said. "... I come from the same community you come from." — Scott Hunter photo
