Police chase down "stolen" car

by Roger S. Lucas

A Grand Coulee man driving a stolen vehicle at speeds up to 100 mph was finally stopped near Steamboat Rock State Park, police reported.

Christopher Peoples, 23, was seen driving near Pole Park Saturday, June 24, about 7 p.m., and refused to pull over, police said.

They tried to stop him as he turned onto Federal Avenue and then on a number of side streets before racing out of town on SR-155, police reported.

Police had gotten a call on the stolen vehicle from its owner, who said she was pursuing her black Nissan Murano and gave police the direction it was going.

Officer Chris McClanahan spotted the Nissan and gave chase through the streets of Grand Coulee, where the SUV reportedly sped through 20 mph streets at speeds over 60 mph, as people along the way pointed which way the Murano had turned.

McClanahan gave chase on the back road toward Delano and across a two-track private dirt road between Delano and Electric City.

Meanwhile, officer Dan Holland had questioned the owner of the car and then headed south on SR-155, looking for the vehicle.

He saw Peoples run off the roadway near Steamboat Rock State Park, then re-enter the roadway, this time heading north, meeting McClanahan as he straddled the centerline with the patrol car.

The Murano nearly ran McClanahan off the road, police said.

Officers caught up with the vehicle at milepost 17, where Peoples stopped and obeyed an order to "get on the ground."

He told the officers that his pregnant girlfriend was in the vehicle. An ambulance was called to take both the pregnant woman and Peoples to the hospital. She said her stomach was hurt by the seat belt when the car had gone off road. Peoples complained of a head injury from hitting his head on the ceiling.

Peoples was arrested and later taken to Grant County jail, facing charges of attempting to elude police, violation of a protection order, possession of a stolen vehicle, reckless endangerment and driving while his license was suspended.

CEO out at local hospital

by Scott Hunter

Almost a year after he started, the hospital's CEO resigned last week after a committee of the hospital commission interviewed employees ahead of his upcoming evaluation.

Jonathan Owens took the reins of Coulee Medical Center in July 2016.

Owens stopped a plan last fall that had the hospital spending more on an electronic medical records system than it could afford.

He hired a financial consultant to target high expenses and low revenue areas that had contributed to losses that forced the hospital to pay debts with county warrants, instituting a plan in March for a $3.1 million turnaround this year.

Owens resigned last Wednesday night at a hospital district commission meeting. President Jerry Kennedy said that he and Commissioner Betty Brueske, as the commission's human resources committee, began preparations a month ago for Owens' first annual performance evaluation.

They interviewed 20 hospital staffers, including its management team.

During the process, which Kennedy described as very open, concerns were voiced that the management structure was changing in a way that had everyone reporting directly to the chief executive officer, Kennedy said.

"Jonathan chose to resign," Kennedy said Monday.

He said Ramona Hicks has agreed to take an interim CEO position. He noted that Kelly Hughes is now the chief financial officer and Dr. Sam Hsieh the chief of medical staff.

Hicks joined CMC in 1993 as a surgical technician and has served as operating room supervisor, infection control nurse, employee health nurse, quality director, risk manager and chap-

Woman pushes for animal rescue in city

by Roger S. Lucas

Dorothy Harris is the type of person who doesn't give up easily.

She has been trying to convince the city of Grand Coulee that a dog rescue shelter would benefit the city and provide a service that the city desperately needs.

She has appeared twice at the city council, only to be turned aside.

Now she plans a run at the city's planning commission on Aug. 9.

Harris was told by a neighbor that "you can't fight city hall."

She doesn't see it that way, but more as providing a service that the city sorely needs.

She and her sister-in-law, Dee Harris, have "rescued" some 400 dogs and 600 cats, gotten them fit and found homes for them, Harris says.

At the last council meeting, Harris was told that there was no way that a "rescue" operation would be allowed in an R-1 (residential) zone. Harris lives on Young Street.

"I can look out and see the mayor's own commercial operation, hardly a block away," Harris stated. She was referring to Mayor Paul Townsend's TNT Welding

McClure Ranch almost 100 years old

by Jacob Wagner

In 1918, William McClure and his son, Robert, hitched their horses to their wagon and headed from the Spokane area to the Colville Indian Reservation to establish a homestead claim to 480 acres.

McClures have lived north of Nespelem for generations now as loggers, farmers, cowboys, and homesteaders.

The original homestead is still standing, and over 100 relatives from as far away as Colorado gathered on the family property June 24 to celebrate a little early the 100-year anniversary of the homestead's establishment.

For the first 14 years there was no road to the homestead, located deep in the mountains south of Moses Mountain, 3,500 feet above sea level, and everything, including a plow, had to be taken in on a pack horse.

Only a couple of acres near the homestead were workable as farmland, and were used to grow hay for horses.

which was harvested with a scythe, says Don McClure, now 89, on a recent drive there. The homestead was mostly lived in during the summers as the winters could see up to four feet of snow.

In the 1930s the Civilian Conservation Corps built a road to the homestead and had a camp in the area.

Robert McClure's son, Don, was born in 1928 and has lived in the area all of his life in other houses and cabins, occasionally staying in the homestead.

"Can you imagine living in a homestead way up here?" McClure asks on the 30-minute modern-day drive from his house up into the mountains to the homestead.

McClure explains a lot about life in the earlier days. His father logged with horses for income. They also milked cows and sold milk, cream, and butter. McClure says that he had been milking cows since he was 6 years old.

His father would make ice cream with a big machine, several gallons at a time.

"We'd use about a whole bottle of vanilla," McClure recalls. "I think the neighbors must have smelled it, because it only lasted just a few days."

The McClures would save gigantic amounts of ice in a building that would keep the whole year long.

"We had chickens and pigs and all of that," McClure says. "My dad would cure bacon with salt and we could keep it in a crock for a time. You had to wash all the salt off before you could eat it."

The McClures had electricity installed around 1940, before WWII. McClure says they'd have had to wait until the war was over to install it if they hadn't done it before.

William McClure named a nearby creek North Star Creek, and so the area is sometimes called North Star. The North Star

Fire in 2015, the largest in state history, affected many hillsides of the McClure property and they lost a lot of timber, but the homestead survived.

"This is all fireweed," McClure says, referring to the blue and purple flowers that color the countryside amidst burned trees. "They call it that because it grows after a fire."

McClure started dating his wife, Gerry, in September of 1947, and they married two years later.

"I've lived in a number of shacks, so it wasn't a big deal to live in another one," Gerry McClure says about moving into another cabin on the McClure

Retiring school bus mechanic recounts changes

by Roger S. Lucas

George Davis Jr. will soon be hanging up his wrenches, so to speak.

He submitted his resignation, effective Aug. 31, to the school board last month and will take a break as head mechanic at the school district's bus garage.

He will be leaving the school bus operation a lot different than he found it, some 33 years ago.

When he took over the mechanic role in 1984, the district had 11 buses, nine with red tags on them.

A red tag means that a bus failed to pass its annual test. That was in early September, and school was ready to start.

The buses were readied in time for school.

Davis is known for the pride he takes in his work. Buses are routinely checked every year by the Washington State Patrol, and they are ready to roll.

The district now has 35 buses, and the fleet is constantly updated. There's at least one new bus every year, and sometimes two.

Davis started out in 1984 as a seven-hour-a-day mechanic and a one-hour-a-day bus driver.

"Ray Halsey was bus boss when I started. He told me to take one of the larger buses out to Elmer City and back. When I got back, Ray asked me how I got along, and I said OK," Davis reported. Then Halsey said, "You passed the test, and I'll do the paperwork."

It's a lot different now!

Bus drivers in the modern age have to go through a battery of tests and background checks before they can drive, "most of this at their own expense," Davis noted. "It takes a bus driver about four months to just recover out-of-pocket expenses."

The average age for bus drivers is now about 70.

"When I went to work here, the average age of bus drivers was somewhere around 40," Davis noted.

What are some of the changes in driving school buses from 1984 to now?

"One of the biggest things is discipline," Davis said. "Bus drivers used to handle discipline. We would write up riders, and when they were written up three times they were off."

"Now the state only pays for riders, so kids are not kicked off as much," Davis noted.

When Davis started, drivers made about $2.25 an hour. That has changed, but the district has a difficult time finding drivers.

Last school year a couple of routes went "wanting" because they didn't have drivers.

For many years, Davis was manager of the bus operation, and in recent years he has always helped bus managers out when there was a problem.

wrenches in a few weeks, and no doubt golf a bit more frequently. He has helped the high school golf program off and on over the years, and is known in his own right as a "pretty good golfer." You can find him, always walking the course, out doing his "18" frequently at the local course.

Tribal council votes close

by Roger S. Lucas

The Colville Tribes had some very close races in the Colville Business Council general election June 24.

The poll votes and absentee votes were certified on Thursday.

In Nespelem Position 1 race, Rodney Cawston won over Ricky Gabriel, 392-285. Gabriel had been expelled from the council a week earlier by vote of the council on ethics grounds.

In Nespelem's Position 2 race, longtime business Councilmember Andy Joseph Jr. won out over Charlene Bearcub, 375-305.

In the Inchelium Position 1 race, Joel Boyd won over Alan Hammond, 353-124. In the district's Position 2 race, incumbent Elizabeth "Susie" Allen drew 252 votes to Marvin Kheel's 228 votes.

In Keller District's Position 1 race, Jack W. Ferguson won over John F. Stensgar, 127-78.

In the Omak District, Norma J. Sanchez captured the Position 1 seat by defeating Richard C. Tonasket, 421-194.

In Omak's Position 2 race, Melissa Louis won a close contest over Russell W. Boyd, 312-301.

The business council is made up of 14 members, half coming up for election each year, and serve two-year terms.

The elected council members will be sworn in July 13.

Approval of funds will mean lower payments on sewage plant

by Scott Hunter

A process that for a time stranded some federal funding in Washington D.C., will now play out with Coulee Dam residents paying less for their new wastewater treatment plant because a grant finally came through.

With some prodding,

Mayor Greg Wilder received word in an email Monday morning that more than a half million dollars of the total $7.9 million augmented plan would come through as a loan, and almost a million more in a low-interest loan to allow the town to upgrade its "solids" handling at the new plant.

Wilder said the new bottom line means a typical resident will get a bill about $4 a month less than if the extended package had not been approved.

The news came from the Wenatchee office of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Rural Development on Monday.

It had been all but approved last winter but was held up as the administration in Washington took charge. The local office had taken the issue as far as it could, Wilder said he was told.

So on June 22, Wilder wrote to Senators Maria Cantwell and Patty Murray and to Fourth District Rep. Dan Newhouse, explaining the project is "shovel-ready" and affects not just the town, but the USBR, the Colville Tribes, and other agencies. He also noted the lack of taxable land due to the federal ownership and exemption.

Just before noon Monday, Wilder received word that the extra $936,000 loan and $558,000 grant had been approved by the USDA national office.

Kennedy said a recruitment team will begin the process of finding a new CEO today.

He said that during the process he and Brueske had been "impressed with the quality of the management team" at the hospital.

and David Tylor, who are both on the planning commission.

"When we looked at the map, it appears we are actually in an R-3 zone, which would allow a rescue," Harris said.

The rescue operation might go like this: Someone drops off an animal they can't take care of at Harris' place. She would then see that the animal's health was checked, and then find a home for the animal, all at her own expense.

"We try to save animals so that they are not killed," Harris said.

The alternative to a "rescue" operation often is that cities end up having animals put down, Harris explained.

Letters from Our Readers

Questions for candidates

Here are three questions/concerns/issues that have been posed by our community members to candidates in the upcoming August primary and November election.

Again, I have no favor toward any candidate. I am simply asking questions so that voters can know where you stand and thus cast an informed vote. People are discussing these issues and hoping for your responses, and noting when there is none.

1) Where do you stand on consolidation of our towns and why do you take that particular position? If you are in favor of consolidation, what actions will you take to bring it to fruition?

2) Four years ago, Ben Alling introduced a proposal to build a small water feature in Mason City Park (East Coulee Dam, caddy corner to Harvest Foods) that was interesting and entirely doable. It went nowhere at that time. There is currently nothing in the way of "wet" relief in playgrounds in our town and as we all know, we have no pool. What ideas would you have for making our parks wetter for young families? Have you seen Ben's proposal?

3) Would you be in favor of recording all town council meetings and posting the video of meetings to the Coulee Dam Town internet page so people who cannot otherwise attend council meetings can be apprised of local issues?

Thank you in advance for your anticipated responses. We'd also like to hear about your pet projects and ideas. We CAN all make a difference, but not if we don't communicate. Let's start now.

Asking for a reasonable outcome for rescue

Thank you for the nice piece on 21 June about the rescue situation in the Grand Coulee Area. It seems to me that the last sentence says it all: "But it isn't going to happen under an R-1 zoning, Byers assured her."

Do you know what this tells me? It tells me that I have been selected by the council for its famous SELECTIVE prosecution, with no negotiation, with no tolerance or flexibility; even when I can stand in my own front yard and see the MAYOR'S RV BUSINESS operating at full capacity, I am on the other side of the street in more ways than one.

Now it was pointed out to Ms. Byers that I live in an R-3, which is light industrial, but that was not good enough. It was also pointed out about the car hoarder (who has two more dogs than me and has never even gotten one notice) who lives on the same side of the street as me. Selective prosecution? But we are not discussing that. What we are discussing is:

1. Since we have been fostering for several years now, why is City Council is just now getting involved. I have been working hand in glove with local police departments, fire departments, and individuals for 8 years now.

2. I have asked City Council if we could work together. Note what happened at the last meeting when they said we can work together, and then we show up at the most recent meeting and they just wanted to lynch us right then and now. Is this how they wanted to work together, "The Good Old Bully System"? Is this how they improve and advance OUR community?

3. If the community is asked to pay to license their animals, where is that money going? Because it doesn't help clean up the street of strays, feral animals or even a local shelter.

4. Our rescue is SELF FUNDED and it is NOT costing the city nor anyone else but us financially; we foot the bill on it all. Yet the city is trying to shut down a service where everyone benefits — with no replacement, I might add. And I am sorry, but putting a stray down or driving them over to one of the highest kill shelters in the state just isn't a plan.

5. We get very little help for fear of reprisal or something happening to them and their animals if they go against the city council.

6. Note what the city council currently has as a law, and now they want us to write the ordinance for free, which we don't mind, but what then? The city has no plan or replacement for us except extermination of animals.

I realize that some of these things stated above shouldn't be brought up in polite society, but I think with animals we need to bring up the "untouchable questions" first, because rescue has to speak for the voiceless. Communication delivery is everything, especially in a small town. And that is why we are asking — no, begging — for the help of all citizens in the Grand Coulee Area.

And yes, I said area! If they stop us here it is not just Grand Coulee; we have rescued up to and including Nespelem and over to Coulee City. We have taken these animals to the vet and then on to forever homes, and most of the time out of the area so they won't have to be taken care of again.

So now what are they going to do? What are you going to do if you need to re-home a pet? What are you going to do if you need help with an animal? What are you going to do if you are being overrun by feral cats? Let the city come in? The most of what they have ever done is poison them. And that poisons every other animal in the neighborhood and leaves a vacuum for more cats to come in.

There is a way to do it without the inhumanity and destruction, and that is what we do as a passion. Kindness is not an act, it's a lifestyle.

If the council and the planning board will negotiate in good faith, I will be there on the 9th of August at 5:30 p.m., Grand Coulee City Hall. Please come down and help us negotiate for the area and the owners, people, citizens and animals of Grand Coulee. All we are asking is for a reasonable outcome, some give and take and a special condition/use permit for an R-3 zoning area to continue our work.

Dorothy R. Harris

A letter to the secretary of the U.S. Dept. of Education

Dear Secretary DeVos,

Though I doubt that this letter will reach your desk, I find it ever more necessary as a public school student to address you. I am white, I am Christian, I have a 4.0 GPA, my family lives comfortably, and I do not face many adverse challenges in life; i.e., I am the ideal candidate for your "School Choice" initiative. However, I think what you are doing is WRONG.

Going to a public school, I see the people that will be affected by your various initiatives every day. Many of them get free lunches at school and face violence in the home. They do not deserve to be treated in such an abhorrent way by our government. They are the future of our world, and so I see that in your duty as secretary of Education, that you care for them as well.

At my high school, Lake Roosevelt Jr./Sr. High, over half of all students are below the poverty line. Additionally, our school district, which consists of almost 800 students, is increasing in size, even with new facilities built in 2015 that were only designed for around 650 students.

Grand Coulee Dam School District (GCSDS) resides near the Grand Coulee Dam, which just so happens to be the largest hydroelectric plant in the United States and employs around 500 people, a number which is ever increasing, and also burdening our district with more and more students. With your school choice initiative, even less money would go to our district, because either the Bureau of Reclamation or the Colville Confederated Tribes owns most of the land in our school district. Due to this, we have little to no tax base with which to supplement our meager state funding. Your "School Choice" initiative would leave our area's students with no other alternatives, as other local town's schools are also overburdened with students, and, big surprise, there are no private schools within a feasible driving distance of our district.

Additionally, if (because of your) budget cuts, our school closes in two years, the Grand Coulee Dam area will have no educational choices for Grand Coulee Dam employees, which would greatly reduce hiring rates, which would lower the efficiency of the dam, which would bring back even less money to the government — so are you getting my drift? Your public school budget cuts will cost you, and will cost this generation the education we have a right to.

Your "School Choice" initiative would also allow state funds to go to religious institutions, which by the way, is illegal in Washington. These private schools would be able to discriminate based on religion, ethnicity, test scores, sexual orientation, gender and more, which violates many constitutional rights.

Since many of our students get free or reduced lunches, (66.7 percent) changing regulations on school lunches will affect our students, because for most students, that is the only stable meal they get. If regulations are removed, then students' health will go down, and you will face even more problems.

As I was researching for this paper, I found that you went to a private Christian school. Assuming that you are still Christian, I ask you as a Christian myself if what you are doing helps anyone other than big corporation CEOs that want to get rich off of other Americans' backs.

And so I ask you, does removing all regulations on school lunch help anyone other than the rich white men running the food industry? Does cutting public school funding really help anyone? And come on, do guns have a place in schools? The answer to all of those questions is NO!

The purpose of the Department of Education is to further the education of the American student body, so if Mr. Trump wants to make America great again, (it still is), then you will need to invest in education. America is 17th in educational performance, and the only way to really further America is to make sure that our citizens are educated. And as the old saying goes, "Knowledge is Power," so follow your Christian duty, and do what is right.

At my church, we have a theme that says, "...We will stand as witnesses of God at all times and in all things and in all places..." So do what is right for the American people, not only what is "right" for the one percent.

With Kind Regards, Lillie LaPlace

A more perfect union

Wealthy coastal cities versus the agrarian countryside. Supporters of big central government versus advocates of a limited government. Big states versus small states. Manufacturers versus traders. Debt hawks versus doves. Sound familiar? If you guessed that these conflicts refer to the contemporary United States, you might be surprised they were actually areas of fierce disagreement among Americans in the late 18th century.

While we may seem divided today, we have risen above more severe divisions in the past. One of the major sticking points on adoption of our Constitution was how to balance the interests and representation of the large and small states. The agreement of the Constitutional Convention resulted in the Great Compromise of equal representation of states in the Senate and proportional representation based on population in the House of Representatives. Even after the adoption of the Constitution, in 1794, the very existence of our country was threatened by an uprising. President George Washington faced a revolt from farmers in rural Pennsylvania in an episode called the Whiskey Rebellion. The rebels committed acts of violence, and the stability of our young country was in doubt. Washington found it necessary to lead federal troops into western Pennsylvania to show the strength of the brand new central government's authority. Order was restored, and our country continued.

The domestic debates from the War of Independence in 1776 and the 1790s demonstrate that our national story has not been one of automatic unity and easy agreement. Our history has instead been a series of conflicts, compromises, and even periodic breakdowns in compromise. The stakes have always been high. The United States and our common purpose as a nation have been forged from what seem to be the least likely circumstances: a successful uprising against the most powerful empire at the time, Great Britain. Yet at many of the most critical times in our history, men and women of goodwill have come together in common cause.

In his famous farewell address, Washington exhorted Americans to remember that our freedom depends on our unity:

"The unity of government which constitutes you one people is also now dear to you. It is justly so, for it is a main pillar in the edifice of your real independence, the support of your tranquility at home, your peace abroad; of your safety; of your prosperity; of that very liberty which you so highly prize....Citizens, by birth or choice, of a common country, that country has a right to concentrate your affections. The name of American, which belongs to you in your national capacity, must always exalt the just pride of patriotism more than any appellation derived from local discriminations."

This Independence Day, as we celebrate our freedoms, we are reminded that throughout our history—from 13 original colonies to fifty states—we have had many differences. The success of our experiment of self-government has always hinged on our ability to unify despite our disagreements.

Marilyn Patricia Dye
(November 25, 1927 – June 25, 2017)

Marilyn Patricia Dye, age 89, passed away from natural causes at the Woodland Care Center, Woodland, Washington, on Sunday, June 25, 2017, at 11:45 a.m.

She was born Marilyn McSweeney on November 25, 1927, to Simon and LuLu McSweeney in Morristown, South Dakota. She was the only surviving child after a spinal meningitis outbreak claimed her two siblings. Marilyn moved as a young girl to Grand Coulee, Washington, as her father worked on the Grand Coulee Dam. She graduated from high school at the age of 16.

After high school, Marilyn joined the last class of WAVES in 1945, undergoing training at Sacred Heart School of Nursing in Spokane, Washington, to become a registered nurse, her lifelong career. She made many lifelong friends from high school, her training, and early posting.

In 1950, while working at Grand Coulee Hospital, Marilyn met and married Richard Nicolle, with whom she had one son, Michael. Tragically widowed after only six years of marriage, Marilyn faced many adversities in her early adult life with resiliency, largely due to her extensive support network of friends and family.

She married a second time to Richard Raugust in 1958, only to lose their one-year-old daughter, Terri Ann to an adverse anaphylactic reaction. This second marriage ended in divorce in 1961. Recovering from her loss, Marilyn returned to school to acquire a degree in nurse anesthesia.

In 1961, while working at Grand Coulee Hospital in her new capacity as a registered nurse anesthetist (CRNA), she met and married Leonard Albert Dye, a heavy construction electrician. Their marriage lasted 15 years. They had two sons: Kipp and Shane, and took them to many interesting towns across the Pacific Northwest and to Honolulu, Hawaii.

Being a nurse anesthetist brought great joy to Marilyn. She enjoyed the professionals she worked with and her interesting postings including jobs at Pendleton, Oregon; Portland Oregon; Colfax, Washington; and with the Bechtel Corporation for a year in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

In the late 1980s after almost 30 years, Marilyn transitioned out training at Sacred Heart School of Nursing in Spokane, Washington, to become a registered nurse, her lifelong career. She made many lifelong friends from high school, her training, and early posting.

Marilyn faced many challenges in her life and had to make many tough decisions. She was a survivor and that spirit is reflected in the lives and attitudes of her children. Marilyn is survived by Mike Nicolle, of Vancouver Washington; Kipp Dye and his wife, Linda, of Natick, Maine; Shane Dye, of Portland; her grandchildren: Caitlyn, Courtney, Sean, and Carolyn Dye of Natick and David Dye, of Calgary Alberta, Canada.

A graveside service is scheduled for Monday, July 10, 11 a.m., at Spring Canyon Cemetery in Grand Coulee. All are welcome to attend and celebrate Marilyn's Life.

property after they got together. "We are really blessed to live here."

The McClures live in a modern house now, with a nice collection of antique lanterns swinging on the porch, and family nearby.

A book written by Don McClure, titled "The Homesteader's Son," is available at the Grand Coulee library and details the early days of Nespelem, homestead life, and more.

Library program will present hydropower cool story

The Grand Coulee library will be a spot to learn the "cool true story" about how power companies like Grant PUD use the naturally-occurring water cycle to generate electricity, and also how power is delivered to customers throughout Grant County, the PUD said Monday.

The program will provide plenty of hands on activities, including acting out the "Water Cycle" play, creating a human-conducting electrical circuit and even an opportunity for attendees to generate their own power. There will also be important information about electrical safety, the PUD said.

The program will be presented in Grand Coulee at 11 a.m. July 11.

Other libraries where the program is scheduled are:

- Mattawa: July 7, 10 a.m.
- George: July 7, 2:30 p.m.
- Quincy: July 12, 10 a.m.
- Ephrata: July 12, 1 p.m.
- Moses Lake, July 13, 2 p.m.
- Warden, July 13, 4:30 p.m.
- Soap Lake, July 14, 10:30 a.m.
- Coulee City, July 19, 3 p.m.

Burning banned in two counties

by Roger S. Lucas

Both Grant and Okanogan County officials imposed temporary bans on outdoor burning last week.

Grant County's board of commissioners banned all outdoor burning until further notice.

The temporary burn ban was prompted in part by a huge range fire near Wenatchee and Quincy, and generally very dry conditions throughout the area.

The commissioners noted the current range fires were putting pressure on firefighting resources.

Anyone caught burning outdoors could suffer fines and other consequences, the commissioners stated in their notice.

Even though the current range fires were caused by lightning, and not by outdoor burning, conditions are dry and just right for potential fires, the county release indicated.

With the hot, dry, arid conditions, and a heavy load of dry grass and sagebrush throughout the county, officials are expecting additional wildfires to ignite.

The restrictions prohibit the burning of yard waste, allow no burn barrels, and let farmers burn only with EPA approval.

The commissioners stated that if conditions worsen, additional restrictions might follow.

The county burn ban does not change the burn ban already in place in the county's cities and towns, a ban that was imposed by the State Department of Ecology in 2007. When the temporary burn ban is lifted, the existing ban on burning within cities and Urban Growth areas will still be in place, the county release stated.

As of Friday, the Grand Coulee Volunteer Fire Department had a wildland fire truck assisting on a large fire near Quincy.

Okanogan County, officials stated, is experiencing weather conditions that are contributing to unusual fire conditions, and the potential for large and catastrophic fires exists that may be a threat to life and cause damage to buildings.

The Okanogan County resolution declared that a hazardous situation exists and that actions involving various county and other local agencies must be taken to help alleviate threats and damages.

The use of gas or charcoal fired barbecues is allowed. The exemption will only apply to those improved private recreational areas within Okanogan County.

Recreational fires must not be conducted within 25 feet of a structure or combustible material. Open burning, camp fires, or recreational fires must constantly be attended until the fire is completely extinguished. The attendant shall have some form of fire-extinguishing equipment such as a shovel and dirt, sand, or class A fire extinguisher, water barrel, garden hose or water truck sufficient to extinguish the fire and be available for immediate use.

Reeder finishes fire academy training

Joshua Reeder of Grand Coulee just finished the Washington State Patrol Fire Academy. He was at the academy from April 1 through June 25 on a scholarship he was awarded earlier this year. Reeder is a member of the Electric City Volunteer Fire Department as a lieutenant and will be returning for additional training in July this year. — submitted photo

Ending 42 years

Tim Lynch ended 42 years as manager of Coulee Dam's wastewater treatment plant last Friday. Employees held a party late Friday to acknowledge Lynch's service to the town. Lynch said he would have plenty to do in retirement, fishing for one thing. At the retirement party was Barry Peacock, who recently retired from running the town crew. — Roger S. Lucas photo

Coulee Cops

Compiled from police files

Grand Coulee Police

6/23 - Police located a woman in Safeway that had been banned from the store earlier, and reminded her that she would have to leave. She did.

- An officer returning from taking a person to Grant County jail struck a deer near milepost 22. The patrol car sustained damage to the front bumper, fender and headlamp area.

6/24 - An officer responded to a report of loud noise at a Hill Avenue apartment. All was quiet when the officer arrived, but an unlocked storage area was secured while the officer was on site.

- Police went to a Spokane Way home in order to retrieve a cell phone from a woman, but no one was home at the time. The officer found a bottle of vodka and some cigarettes on the patio next to the door, but nothing else.

- Police went to the city shop where a door was open and music playing. Police secured the door.

- A Snohomish man was arrested and taken to Grant County jail after a domestic issue at Sunbanks Lake Resort. A report of a weapon involved was not confirmed.

- Police checked on a storage unit alarm on A Street, but couldn't find any problem.

6/26 - A woman on Dill Avenue asked police to declare her van stolen after her daughter failed to return it on time.

- The manager of apartments on Hill Avenue reported that someone had tipped a bucket of paint over and it had run all over the sidewalk. She gave police the description of a person in the area at the time, but that person wasn't located.

6/27 - A Renton man was told he couldn't fly his drone off Riley Point because of the electrical hazard from the high voltage power lines from Grand Coulee Dam. He told police he didn't see any signs saying he couldn't fly his drone.

- A city employee told police that there were some concerns about a dog on Ronald Drive. Police checked on the report and found a dog tied up under a deck with no water or food. The officer tried to locate someone on the property, but no one answered the door. The report stated the officer would continue to try to talk with the dog's owner.

- Police advised a landlord on Burdin Boulevard that a dispute she had with a tenant was a civil matter.

6/28 - A man living on Young Street was arrested for possession of heroin after he allegedly tried to elude police when officers responded to a report that a man was striking two women. The man fled when he saw police officers and was chased down, tossing items away while running, including heroin "balls" and a syringe, police reported. Police found that the man was wanted on two warrants for his arrest. He was taken to Grant County jail.

- Police responded to a report of an unconscious man in an apartment doorway in Electric City. He was gone when police arrived.

6/29 - Police talked to juveniles on skateboards and a bicycle after receiving a complaint from a motorist who reported that she'd nearly hit the bike rider.

Coulee Dam Police

6/21 - Police found an open front door at the Lake Roosevelt High School gym. The officer went through the gym to make sure there was no one inside and secured the building.

6/22 - Tribal police asked for assistance in watching for a driver on her way to Coulee Dam who had been involved in a custodial interference. Later Tribal authorities advised police that they had the suspect stopped just outside of Coulee Dam.

6/23 - A woman on Holly Street advised police that someone had taken a handgun, some pills and a computer from her home. She offered police the name of a person she thought might be involved.

6/24 - Police took a man wanted on a felony warrant to Okanogan County jail.

- A couple on Cedar Street reported that someone had taken a large jar with about $1,000 in it during the night while they were away. They told police that they had been putting money in the jar for some time for a vacation.

6/25 - Police checked on a report of a suspicious woman at Cole Park. When confronted, the woman told police that all was well and she was just waiting for her father to come pick her up.

6/26 - While checking on a family dispute, police learned that a woman was wanted on a warrant out of Okanogan County. She was arrested and taken to jail.

6/28 - A woman whose vehicle had the windshield broken out was stopped. The officer found that the woman was wanted on a warrant related to unpaid fines and that she had never had a driver license. She was notified that she would receive a citation in the mail and told not to drive.
